Morgan Tells Germany Not to Expect Loan

MUST FIRST ACT ON REPARATIONS, SAYS U. S. BANKER

Statement Is Issued by Morgan Firm, It Is Said, to Set at Rest "Highly Fantastical Stories."

INTEREST CENTERING ON COUNCIL IN PARIS

America Is Expected to Participate in Some Form and to Inform the Allies of Her Position.

BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS.
New York, December 18.—J. P. Morgan & Co. tonight issued a statement declaring they had notified the German ambassador to this country "that it was impossible for us to discuss or consider a loan to Germany unless and until the reparations question was settled."
This statement was issued, it was learned, to set at rest what were described as "highly fantastical stories" which have been published regarding the possibility of the flotation of an international loan to Germany, estimated as high as $1,500,000,000.
The statement follows:
"Dr. Otto Wiedfeldt, the German ambassador, called on Mr. Morgan Saturday to make inquiry as to the possibility of our undertaking to assist in floating a large so-called international loan to Germany. In his reply Mr. Morgan advised to the effect that he had made following the sitting of the 'bankers' committee last June, and in effect told the ambassador that our position was exactly the same as it was then."
"He informed Dr. Wiedfeldt that, while he greatly desired to be of service,"

Wounded Bandit May Give Clue In Mint Robbery

Masked Bandits Stage $200,000 Holdup in Heart of Denver.

BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS.
Denver, Colo., December 18.—Masked bandits, heavily armed and without regard for human life, today staged the largest and most sensational daylight robbery in police annals, on the doorsteps of the United States mint here.

Charles Linton, a guard for the federal reserve bank, was killed by a rain of bullets from the guns of the bandits, who escaped with $200,000 in currency.

Armed guards in the second story of the mint building poured a fusillade of bullets at the bandits as they fled in a touring car. One of the robbers—even more daring than his confederates—who stood on the running board of the speeding automobile and fired a final volley at the mint guards, was wounded. He was dragged into the speeding bandit car and was carried away.

Robbery Over Quickly.
The whole robbery occupied not more than one minute, according to mint officials. Police officials estimated the time at less than five minutes.

Police expect to be aided in their search for the escaped bandits by the fact that one was shot.

An automobile carrying seven men, two wearing masks and one drooping

BLUFFED SUICIDE TO FRIGHTEN WIFE; GETS ARRESTED

Chicago, December 18.—"You nag me so much I want to die," Walter Jaroski told his wife, "I'm going to kill myself."
Brandishing a revolver, he brushed her aside and rushed to the bedroom, locking himself in.
"Bang!" went the gun, and Mrs. Jaroski fainted.
Forcing open the bedroom door, police found Jaroski unhurt and a bullet hole in the ceiling.
"I just wanted to teach her a lesson," Jaroski told them.
He was arrested, charged with disorderly conduct.

PRESIDENT ASKED TO HELP SET LIMIT ON SMALLER SHIPS

Requested by House to Confer With Foreign Powers on Number Vessels Under 10,000 Tons.

NAVAL FORCE LIMITED BY BILL TO $6,000

Appropriations Measure, Passed Late Monday, Carries Total of $325,000,000 for Year's Expenses.

Washington, December 18.—The naval appropriations bill carrying a request that the president negotiate with foreign powers relative to limiting construction of war craft under 10,000 tons was passed late today by the house.

The bill, which carries a total of $325,000,000, stood up precisely as framed by Chairman Kelley's subcommittee, and provides for an enlisted naval force of 80,000, the same as fixed last year.

There was talk over the provision under which the president is asked to negotiate with Great Britain, Japan, France and Italy, but an effort to change the language was dropped in the face of overwhelming opposition to any alteration.

Amendment Beaten.
An amendment to strike out the section offered by Representative Logan, democrat, South Carolina, was defeated and finally Representative Lineberger, republican, California, withdrew his amendment "suggesting to the president the desirability of entering into further negotiations with other powers as soon as he may deem it practicable."

There was laughter from the republican side when Representative Linthicum, democrat, Maryland, presented an amendment requesting the president also to negotiate with foreign nations with a view to forming

23 Persons Saved from Doomed Tug In Lake Superior

Men Had Been Without Food, Fuel, Fire or Arms for Five Days.

BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS.
Sault Ste. Marie, Mich., December 17.—After being marooned for five days on the barren Lizard Isle in Lake Superior, with the temperature hovering well below the zero mark and apparently without food, 23 of the 27 missing persons from the ill-fated tug Reliance have been rescued by the tug Gray and Favorite, according to a meagre wireless dispatch received here this afternoon from the Gray.

Fate of the remaining four missing persons was not revealed in the cryptic dispatch flashed by the Gray's wireless. Search for them is being continued. Those rescued include Captain D. A. Williams, master of the Reliance, Captain John McPherson of the Booth Fisheries, a passenger on the craft, still is missing. The message mentioned 40 other names.

Hope Is Abandoned.
Hope of finding any of the missing persons alive virtually was abandoned here earlier in the day when the Gray reported the finding of two battered lifeboats from the Reliance. It now is assumed the boats were

SENATOR GEORGE INTRODUCES BILL TO HELP FARMERS

Georgian Asks That Reserve Banks Be Allowed to Handle Notes for Agricultural Purposes.

LONGER LOAN NEEDED TO ASSIST PLANTERS

At Present No Paper With a Maturity Date of More Than Six Months Can Be Handled.

BY JAMES A. HOLLOMAN.
Constitution Bureau, Raleigh Hotel.

Washington, December 18.—(By Constitution Leased Wire).—At this hour when the eyes of the nation are turned on the senate fight for constructive farm credit legislation with the subsidy bill the base of the battle between contending factions of the majority party, Senator Walter F. George, of Georgia, introduced today a bill providing for the handling by the federal reserve banks throughout the United States of notes and credits, the proceeds of which are to be used for agricultural purposes and for the handling of live stock, for a term of 12 months.

Under the present provisions of the federal reserve act no such paper with a maturity date of more than six months can be handled by federal reserve banks.

Many of the crops grown throughout the country require more than six months from the planting to maturity of the crop. Not only is this true but when limited to a six-month maturity it requires the borrower to pay in such a limited period that he cannot handle the crop.

Missing Airship Reported Found Under Snow Pile

Pilots Believe That Bonstra Has Found Way to Safety.

BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS.
Salt Lake City, Utah, December 18.

Reports to air mail service headquarters here this afternoon said the airplane of Pilot Henry G. Bonstra, who has been missing since Friday, has been located 20 miles southeast of Coalville, Utah.

Pilot Paul Scott, one of the air mail fliers searching for Pilot H. B. Bonstra, returned this afternoon and confirmed a report made earlier in the day that an airplane had buried in the snow could be seen near Coalville.

"I saw Bonstra's flying suit lying on the ground on the right side of the plane," Scott said on his return. "He has probably not been seriously hurt by the fall and took off his suit that he might walk to the ranch houses in the valley."

While searching parties are racing to the spot, officials of the air mail service here believe that Bonstra has found shelter and is safe, awaiting the arrival of his rescuers.

With definite confirmation of the position of the plane, searching parties bearing with them food and medical assistance began their long journey on snowshoes over the great white waste to the plane. Others had already been sent out and arrangements were made to get word to them.

Planes Will Return.
Tucson, Ariz., December 18.—Acting on instructions received today from army headquarters at San Antonio, Colonel E. B. Winans, director of the search for Colonel Frances C. Marshall and Lieutenant Charles L. Webster, lost aviators, ordered the thirty planes which have been engaged in the search to return to their respective stations. The planes will depart tomorrow.

TELLS OF KILLINGS IN HERRIN HORROR

Dr. O. F. Shipman Declares That He Saw Six Unarmed Men Shot Down by Mob Members.

BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS.
Marion, Ill., December 18.—Dr. O. F. Shipman testified today at the trial of five men in connection with the Herring riot that he had been an eyewitness of the shooting down of six unarmed men by a mob in front of the Herring cemetery the day of the killings.

Two other witnesses, Mr. and Mrs. George Nelson, testified that they had seen a crowd of armed men drive 30 or 40 unarmed prisoners from the mine and that there were 48 in the group.

R. O. Greer, former mayor of Herring, also testified that he had seen the prisoners brought from the mine and that there were 48 in the group.

Dr. Shipman testified that he had followed the mob and its bleeding, pleading captives a mile and a half through the streets of Herring to the cemetery that there had been a volley of shots and that he saw the six prisoners drop to the dusty road.

Fires Into Prostrate Body.
The witness swore that Joe Carnaghi, one of the defendants had fired into Hoffman's prostrate body and that blood had spouted a foot into the air as the bullet struck.

"Oh, men, men, what are you doing," the witness quoted Hoffman as saying.

"If you have ever said your prayers, say them now, and you, for you won't have much longer," he testified an unidentified leader of the mob told the prisoners just before they were shot down.

Asked if he could tell who did the shooting, Dr. Shipman named Joe Carnaghi and Leva Mann, who have been indicted but who are not defendants in the present trial.

The name of Peter Hiller, another of the defendants, who was married to the wife of one of the defendants, was mentioned.

Mother and Six Children Need Help—Opportunity No. 5

BY PAUL STEVENSON.
This Christmas "Opportunity" should be spelled in capital letters.

And within a few hours after this story is told there ought to be a dozen people and organizations fighting for the privilege of giving the unfortunate family it represents a chance to exist for another year.

Just $704.60 for the year, or $13.65 for each week, is required. Read this—then sit down and think.

A woman who was deserted by her husband two years ago is struggling to support six children and an aged, helpless father. The oldest child is a girl of thirteen. The youngest is a fat and dimpled little boy just past two years old.

Four other boys of 12, 9, 6 and 4 years of age complete the family. When all these sturdy boys grow up to be men the money troubles of the mother will be over but until then—

Mother Makes Meager Income.

The deserted mother is 37 years old. She makes a meager and uncertain income by washing window curtains, an industry developed for her by the Associated Charities.

Sometimes business is almost good enough to bring in sufficient money to buy food. That's all, food, nothing else.

COUNCIL DEFEATS TRAFFIC MEASURE AFTER TIE BALLOT

Acting Mayor Goodhart Casts Deciding Vote Against Proposed Regulation of Automobiles.

FRIENDS OF NEW LAW WILL CONTINUE FIGHT

"Peachtree and Whitehall Will Look Like a Graveyard If Parking Is Prohibited," Says Goodhart.

By the narrow margin of one vote, city council Monday afternoon tabled the revised traffic ordinance recommended by the special council-citizens committee of twelve members.

The deciding vote was cast by Acting Mayor Pro Tem Harry Goodhart after council had tied 14 to 14 on the motion to table. Advocates of more stringent parking regulations said they would renew their fight at the first regular meeting following January 1.

Council at its last meeting adopted the measure, which, among other provisions, prohibited parking on Peachtree, Whitehall and a number of other important thoroughfares in the downtown district. It was subsequently non-concurred in by unanimous vote of the aldermanic board.

Alderman Goodhart called for a conference committee with the view of getting action favorable or adverse on the ordinance.

FIND LOST BANKER IN ARKANSAS CITY

J. C. Todd, Who Disappeared From Hogansville in November, Is at Son's Home in Marietta.

Hogansville, Ga., December 18.—(Special).—J. C. Todd, prominent banker and planter of Hogansville, who disappeared November 17, has been found at Quinn, Ark., and brought to the home of his son, Dr. R. W. Todd, in Marietta, according to word reaching here today.

Mr. Todd was county commissioner and a director in the Planters' bank here, but had severed his connection with the bank just prior to his disappearance.

The banker was last seen on the day of his departure on the banks of the Chattahoochee river between Carrollton and Newnan, giving rise to the suicide theory. The river between these points was futilely dragged by the searchers.

A. F. Todd, a brother of the banker, resides on Hartford avenue, Atlanta, and Clarence Todd, a son, lives in Chattanooga.

At Home of Son.
Marietta, Ga., December 18.—(Special).—J. C. Todd, the Hogansville banker and planter who mysteriously disappeared from his home after severing his connection with the Planters' Bank of Hogansville, of which he was a director, was recently found here to the home of his son, Dr. R. W. Todd.

Mr. Todd, suffering from amnesia, according to Mrs. R. W. Todd, his daughter-in-law, wandered off from his home in Hogansville. After a search which extended over several states he was located in the Arkansas town.

Learns of Finding.
A. F. Todd, brother of J. C. Todd, who lives on Hartford avenue, learned first of the finding of his missing brother when he was called last night by a representative of The Constitution.

He was pleased by the news conveyed to him by The Constitution, but was at loss to explain the failure of his nephew to notify him.

He declared he was going to Marietta today to visit his brother and assist in making arrangements for proper treatment.

DRY ENFORCEMENT PROSPECTS BRIGHT, STATE GOVERNORS

Executives Tell President That He Should Issue Proclamation Asking for Ban on Prohibition Jokes

HEAVIER SENTENCES BY JUDGES ARE URGED

No Mention Made of Beer or Light Wines, or Modification of Dry Act, Except by Governor Ritchie

BY CLAYTON WHITEHILL,
United News Staff Correspondent.

Washington, December 18.—Prohibition is here to stay, in the opinion of the 15 governors who have assured President Harding of earnest co-operation in enforcing the Volstead law.

But the governors believe there are two things that ought to be recommended in "an earnest official appeal," in the form of a presidential proclamation:

1. That the press desist from publishing prohibition jokes, and from "undermining the moral support of prohibition by treating the subject with levity."

2. That judges impose heavier sentences on dry law violators. These are the fundamental conclusions reached at the informal luncheon conference between President Harding, Vice President Coolidge, Secretary Mellon, Attorney-General Daugherty, Prohibition Commissioner Haynes and the governors at the white house Monday.

Wines Not Mentioned.
Although President Harding refrained from offering any suggestions other than to stress the seriousness of the enforcement situation, the expressions of opinion "went around the table" beginning with Governor Cox, of Massachusetts, to the president's right, and ending with Governor Kilby, of Alabama, on the president's left. No mention was made of light wines and beer or modification of the Volstead law in any manner except by Governor Ritchie, of Maryland, who raised the only dissenting voice. His state, incidentally, is the only state that does not have some sort of prohibition law.

In fact, the opinion prevailed that enforcement is improving and that the future of prohibition looks bright. Governor Allen, of Kansas—a figure of particular interest because his state was among the first to enact a dry law—pointed out that after Kansas had prohibition for 20 years there were still more flagrant violations of the law than exist in any large city at the present time. In other words, Allen concluded, people are slow to realize the seriousness of the prohibition law and enforcement is consequently a slow and tedious process. Therefore the country is going through a natural period of prohibition development.

The governors complained that their chief difficulty lies in the cities "where the people have not yet come to the realization that prohibition is here to stay." Therefore, an increase in co-ordination between state and

FAIR TWO
Federal enforcement officials were recommended together with an increase in the number of federal dry officers, particularly to guard ports of entry and roads used by rum runners.
Did Not Complain.
Contrary to expectations of some governors, the president did not register any complaint against the states nor did he come to them for help in enforcing the federal law. His only contention was that by obtaining full co-operation of the states, the federal government could derive the benefit of their concurrent powers.
Attorney-General Daugherty and Commissioner Haynes addressed the conference briefly, and declared they would welcome any suggestion and complaints at all times.
Another conference between the president and newly-elected governors, just as soon as the press of state legislative business will permit of their coming to Washington will probably be held, it was indicated.
Monday's conference occupied practically the whole afternoon and President Harding canceled all engagements in order to devote his entire attention to the meeting.
Following the conference, Commissioner Haynes issued the following statement:
"In many cases the reports of governors were of an encouraging nature, indicating very gratifying progress in making the enforcement of the Volstead act effective. Numerous instances of lack of co-operation were pointed out, many instances of the inadequacy of federal forces were suggested. On the whole the informal conference was helpful to both state executives and federal officials who were present."
"There was a preponderance of opinion that an earnest official appeal for reverence for the law and a cordial support of law enforcement by the press would combine to cure the worst conditions reported."

The hardships suffered by the band during their five days' imprisonment will, it is believed here, become new history of the lakes. When the sinking tug none of the men had food, fuel or fire arms. The ice on which they landed is practically barren and uninhabited. It is believed there are a few huts, however, left by Indians and trappers in past seasons. It probably will be late tomorrow before the tugs can return to this port and because of the ice in Lake Superior. Physicians and medical supplies, together with food and fuel, were taken aboard the rescue tugs before they started to fight their way through the ice floes to the wreck scene.

occurred off the Lizard Islands, was the result of a gamble with fate on the part of those aboard the tug. After lying in a sheltered cove for three days in the hope of riding out the storm that was sweeping the lake, Captain Williams found his supplies of food and fuel almost exhausted. The lake mariners elected to tempt fate and breast the blizzard rather than chance death from starvation.
Dashed Against Rocks.
Four hours after the anchor had been hoisted the Reliance was dashed against the rocks and her wheel disabled.
The craft filled rapidly. Just before the wireless was put out of commission the operator flashed a single call for help. It was this call, received here, that instigated one of the most thrilling rescue attempts in the history of the lakes.
All those on board took the lifeboats as the tug began to settle beneath their feet. Seven of the 30 aboard reached safety Saturday night, after a battle against the waves and a 136-mile trek over a white wilderness. Two others, Mr. and Mrs. John Harten, cooks, were left at a wayside station when the woman became exhausted and had to be carried four miles through the snowdrifts.
The rescue tugs had made two previous attempts to reach the side of the Reliance but were beaten back by the gale.

COUNCIL DEFEATS TRAFFIC ORDINANCE

kins, brought in a report recommending one-hour parking on Peachtree and Whitehall.
This brought on a warm battle, since the principal point of disagreement was since the traffic committee was appointed whether or not these two streets should be made non-parking.
Councilman J. C. Murphy introduced an amendment to the conference committee's report designating Peachtree and Whitehall as non-parking.
He also introduced an amendment to strike out the provision for the erection of 32 "safety islands" in the downtown streets to serve as loading and unloading platforms for street car passengers and for convenience of pedestrians. This amendment was adopted.
Alderman Goodhart attacked the non-parking idea relative to Peachtree and Whitehall. He declared that if parked cars were allowed, two streets "will look like a graveyard."

Wants One-Way Streets

Councilman Murphy replied that Atlanta will never get traffic through the city until her principal arteries are cleared of standing vehicles. He said the merchants have an exaggerated idea of how much they will be hurt by this rule. He declared the public convenience, rather than the desires of the merchants, should be heeded in passing a traffic law, assuring that he did not think the merchants would attempt to commercialize the streets.
The solution of the whole traffic fiasco, according to Alderman W. C. Davis, is one-way streets.
At this point, Alderman A. H. Cochran, who had surrendered his gavel as presiding officer to Alderman Goodhart, took the floor and moved that the whole ordinance be tabled.
The erection of a number of additional traffic towers on the streets in the congested area was referred to the council of 1923.
Would Confiscate Cars.
A measure to curb reckless autoists and decrease accidents on the streets of Atlanta by confiscating the car of a violator for a limited period up to 90 days was introduced in city council Monday afternoon by Councilman J. Allen Couch.
Defeat of a Georgia workmen's compensation law applicable to employees of the city of Atlanta, adoption of an ordinance giving City Clerk Walter Taylor authority to appoint the city license inspectors, who already work under his direction, and reference to the 1923 council of the measure of Alderman W. C. Davis to establish another division of recorder's court were other features of the meeting.

Police Chores Peaceful

No police fight was so much as attempted at the session Monday. Mayor Key's veto of the Wayne resolution giving the police, health and park committees power to nominate the department heads, was filed without comment.
A resolution was adopted appointing a committee composed of A. M. Schoen, chairman of the board of consulting engineers; Fire Chief W. B. Cody, Building Inspector C. J. Bowen, W. C. Spiker, Hal F. Hentz, T. T. Flagler, H. D. Cutter, Jr., and R. Milfin Hood to revise the dry building code.
Councilman Watkins offered a resolution providing for the printing of 500 copies of the city code and sale of the surplus after council members and department heads have been supplied. It was referred to next year's body.
Urges Speedy Building.
A joint paper by Alderman DuVall, Councilman Seawright and Councilman Wardlaw urging on the board of education more speed in erection of a new Davis Street school building, was referred to next year's board.
A resolution was introduced to allow the recent striking shomen of the Southern railway until February 1 to pay their city taxes. This measure went over to the new body.
A petition protesting the proposed widening of Fifth street was filed with council and was sent to the street committee.

CENTRAL AMERICA PLANNING UNION

Delegates Now Meeting in Washington Agree to Call Conference on Subject in January, 1926.

Washington, December 18.—The Central American conference today disposed of the troublesome question of the proposed Union of Central America by agreeing to call a conference to consider it in January 1926, and proceeded to work on the revision of the 1907 treaties. A subcommittee, composed of the heads of the five delegations, was appointed to study the treaty establishing the court of arbitration of Carago, the proposed reorganization of which is reported to have caused some disagreement among the delegates. The conference then adjourned to await the subcommittee's report.

A motion recommending adoption of a convention looking to improvement of the condition of the working class in Central America was made during today's session by Maximo Zepeda, delegates from Nicaragua, and was included in the program for later consideration.

Secretary Hughes, who presided, refrained from voting on the question of taking up at this conference the proposal for a Union of Central America, and the motion was lost by a vote of 3 to 2, only Salvador joining Honduras in its support. The delegates then, in recognition of the "aspirations of the Central American peoples for their political union in the near future," decided unanimously to call the 1926 conference to establish the basis of the Central American Union. This question had delayed the work of the conference for two weeks on the mat-

In the jail tonight to Anna Campbell, 18 years old, of Marion, was brought into the evidence for the first time today. Hiller was the fifth and last defendant who has been mentioned in the testimony as having been seen with guns during the rioting.

Hiller Is Named.
George Nelson was the first witness to name Hiller, whom he said, he had seen among the crowd at the mine in the morning, but without a gun. Dr. Shipman testified that he had seen Hiller that night with a gun strapped about his body and that Hiller had said to him that some of the prisoners had gotten away and that he was bound back to the mine to search for them. Shipman also said that he had seen Leva Mann step out of the mob at the cemetery after the shooting, wave a gun about his head and declare: "Come on boys, we've got two more down here."

Mrs. Nelson testified that she had recognized C. K. McDowell, superintendent of the "strip" mine, limping painfully along among the prisoners taken from the mine; that he was taken down a road and that she later heard shots. She said the only other person in the crowd she recognized was Mrs. Otis Clark, wife of one of the defendants, and that Mrs. Clark said: "They've got old Peg Leg."

OSSINING OBJECTS TO BECOMING RENO FOR NEW YORKERS

Ossining, N. Y., December 18.—This town objects to being a backyard Reno for New York couples seeking divorce.

Supreme Court Justice Frank L. Young, of Ossining has served notice to establish the basis of the Central American Union. This question had delayed the work of the conference for two weeks on the mat-

His declaration came after he granted a decree to Mrs. Brandon Hendricks, of Manhattan. The sentimentality was a window shade in a Mrs. N. H. bungalow that suddenly rolled up exposing to witnesses what should not have been seen. "I feel it is not right for outside judges to air the soiled linen of New York city divorce cases," Justice Young asserted.

WOUNDED BANDIT MAY GIVE CLUE

over the edge of the machine, bleeding profusely was reported to police as having been seen speeding northward out of the city shortly after the robbery. Police cars have been dispatched in pursuit of this car.

The disregard of the bandits for human life marks the robbery, according to police, as one of the most heinous in the history of the city. Offshoots, two of the bandits bombarded the front door of the mint as they leaped from their automobile. Fifty government employees, summoned to the scene, seized shotguns and rushed to the doors or windows of the mint, shooting at the holdup men, who returned the fire and at the same time calmly proceeded to load the fifty packages of currency into their own car.

Many Shots Fired.
Fustilades of shots ripped through buildings across the streets and spat against granite walls as the guards and bandits exchanged shots.

The four members of the federal reserve bank crew employed in the transfer of the funds, J. E. Olson, cashier, C. T. Linton, J. Adams and William Havener, had just left the entrance of the mint and were walking toward their machine standing near the curb, when another car containing the bandits drove up alongside of the wire-enclosed truck.

According to witnesses, two or three men carrying guns leaped from the car and with a shout of "Hands up!" opened fire.

Linton, according to information obtained by police, attempted to throw the money into the gridded back compartment of the reserve truck at the holdup's command and he was shot by the leader of the bandits. Linton fell to the pavement. He was removed to the county hospital, where he died without regaining consciousness.

NO AMERICAN LOAN FOR GERMANY NOW

ies to the general situation, nevertheless matters had manifestly reached such a point that it was not possible for us to discuss or to consider a loan to Germany unless and until the reparations question was settled."

Had Presented Plan.
Official denial was made of reports that the Morgan firm had presented "a plan" for the settlement of the reparations problem to the Washington administration. While no official comment was made concerning Mr. Morgan's visit to Secretary Hughes at Washington last week, it is understood the financier merely gave the secretary his views on conditions in Europe, whence he recently returned after a six months' visit.

Mr. Morgan was a member of an international committee of bankers which met in London last June to discuss the question of financial assistance to Germany.

International bankers here are said to believe that before any loan is made to Germany there must be not only a settlement of the reparations question but a sincere effort made by Germany to balance her budget, revise her banking system and stabilize her currency. If these conditions are met a small loan of short duration may be made, but the possibility of such an undertaking is said to be "very remote."

While President Harding's cabinet reparations question under discussion is known to have had the German at a recent meeting, bankers here do not believe that the administration will offer its services as referee on the reparations problem, in view of its definite refusal to consider such action at the request of the German government sometime ago.

The inquiry of Dr. Wiedfeldt is believed to be the first direct proposal made to American bankers for assistance by the German government.

TALK OF U. S. LOAN
DECLARED "IDLE."

BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS.
Washington, December 18.—Adjustment of the reparations dispute between London and Paris is the crux of the European tangle, in the American viewpoint, as stated here today on competent authority. Talk of any American loan to Germany was described as "idle" until such an adjustment had been made. It also was made clear that the question of allied war debts to the United States is not viewed in Washington as involved in the Anglo-French differences as to the amount Germany can pay. Beyond this, official spokesmen refused to go in outlining what the Washington government had in mind. There was no hint as to the purposes or progress of informal discussions with allied leaders which have been indicated both here and abroad to be under way. No answer was returned to inquiries as to whether Germany had again sought American intervention in the reparations difficulty. Hope to Bring Aid.
With the field of speculation thus narrowed, however, it was evident in unofficial talk today, that administration hopes that American influence can aid in the European situation where generally believed to be based on possibilities that may be seen of bringing British and French thought into harmony as to Germany's present economic plight and capacity to pay. Since time lacks for any lengthy process of examination on that point before expiration of the moratorium January 15, there was a tendency to believe that the Washington government had some hope of causing at least a delay in definite action by France after that time.

NAVY IS LIMITED TO 86,000 FORCE

an association of nations. It was thrown out on a point of order made by Representative Wingo, democrat, Arkansas.

Representative Mondell, Wyoming, the republican leader, in supporting the bill's provisions as to negotiations, declared men were going over the country "trying to create the impression that the navy was being neglected," and that talk by those urging great naval expansion was responsible for incorporating the request into the naval bill.

Change Defeated.
An amendment by Representative Oliver, of Alabama, democrat, member of the subcommittee, providing the navy's balance from certain sources be held as a fund for new constructions was defeated over his plea that it would encourage economy. Mr. Mondell, in opposing it, said it was like telling the navy "if you forego, pound cake you may have cakey."

Just before the final paragraph was reached the house halted for 20 minutes to pay tribute to Chairman Kelley, who retires next March. Speeches were made by Representative French, republican, Idaho, a member of the subcommittee; Chairman Madden, of the appropriations committee; Mr. Mondell, Representative Byrnes, democrat, South Carolina; Mr. Oliver and Representative Garrett, Tennessee, the democratic leader. When Mr. Madden concluded everybody rose but Mr. Kelley. Summing up the testimonials, Mr. Garrett declared that the country had a profound admiration for Mr. Kelley's character, ability and labor, and that the country was indebted to him for his services in recent years in framing the navy bills.

As the house was ready to pass the bill, Representative Blanton, democrat, Texas, sought to have it re-committed for the purpose of inserting a provision permitting the use of time measuring devices at navy yards, but it was defeated, 238 to 8.

GEORGE INTRODUCES BILL TO HELP FARMERS

thereby becomes a prey to the speculator who can by manipulation and otherwise hold the value of the crop grown down to a price less than the cost of production until the expiration of the six-month maturity period. It too frequently occurs that as soon as such crops are forced out of the hands of the producer that the market is speedily advanced and the consumer is forced to pay exorbitant prices to speculators and middlemen and thus while the producer is forced to sacrifice his crop the consumer does not receive the benefit of the low prices.

Will Benefit Farmers.
There is no question that the handling of such papers on a maturity basis of 12 months instead of six will greatly benefit the producer and Senator George, in common with many senators from the south and west, is bending every energy to have legislation enacted which will aid the farmer in his present extremity.

Another bill introduced by Senator George provides for the issue of the writ of mandamus as an original writ by the district courts of the United States. As the law now stands no such authority is vested in the district courts.

Discussing his bill and various proposed rural credits legislation, Senator George made the following statement to The Constitution tonight: "Much rural or agricultural credits legislation is now before the senate count of more than six months. These notes and bills are accepted by New York bankers and there is no sound reason why the federal reserve cannot use like paper having a maturity at the time of discount of more than six months.

"The bill makes available for redemption purposes such notes having a maturity at the time of discount of not more than 12 months. This simple amendment to the federal reserve act under a friendly and fair administration of the federal reserve banking system will afford direct and substantial aid upon a sound basis to the southern cotton farmers and the western live stock farmers."

"The farmers are familiar with their local banking institutions. They are acquainted with them. If member and non-member banks (through their connections) are permitted to use for redemption purposes the notes and bills drawn or issued for agricultural purposes and based on live stock having a maturity at the time of discount of not more than six months, agricultural interests will be materially served."

THIEVES MAKE HAUL OF WORKMEN'S TOOLS

Stores and Homes Robbed.
Christmas Gifts Among Loot Sunday.

Workmen engaged in the construction of buildings at 331 North Boulevard and at Jackson street and Highland avenue sustained heavy losses in the way of tools Sunday night, when burglars broke open the large tool house and "cleaned the place."

Those whose tools were taken are E. W. Cady, 137 West Baker street; J. S. Green, 47 Estoria street, and H. S. Workman, 72 Lovejoy street. Their tools were taken from 331 North Boulevard. J. S. Green's tools were stolen from Jackson street and Highland avenue.

Burglars visited the store of Ed Morgan, 126 Fraser street, taking off two crates of cigarettes and two pork hams, besides a quantity of other things.

Butler, Montague & Harris, at 270 Ivy street, reported the theft of $12 in money and a pistol, while a box of rubber goods samples were stolen from the Faxon Manufacturing company's offices, 602 Gould building.

One of the men tricks that thieves played which came to the attention of detectives Monday, was the theft yesterday morning of a lot of things that had been purchased by O. C.

Long, Central avenue, which he intended for Christmas gifts. They were contained in a large box, which the thief made off with, and consisted of a "Mamma doll," a white ivory comb and brush set, silver belt buckle, a dozen hair nets and a baby hat.

POLICE JAIL MORE SUSPECTS IN DRIVE AGAINST THIEVERY

Two more negro suspects were jailed Monday by Detectives Leonard H. Satterfield and W. D. McGee in their determined drive against thieves. The negroes gave their names as Jeff Shorter, 16 Woodrow place, and Will Coffee, 42 Buchanan street.

This makes a total of 11 now held charged with recent robberies. Nine were taken into custody Sunday morning, suspected of connection with the burglary of the grocery store of B. H. Gaddin, at 44 Davis street.

Following their arrest and the recovery by the officers of a large quantity of stolen goods from the attic of the negro house at 110-B Magnolia street, the negroes confessed, it is claimed, and also admitted other robberies.

They are being subjected to severe grillings at the hands of the detectives, who are confident the negroes have not yet told all they know about recent robberies.

POSTPONE HEARING AS UTILITY AGREES TO BETTER SERVICE

The state public service commission Monday agreed to go to Rome January 16 to hear evidence in the petition of the city of Rome for reduction in the gas rates charged in that city by the Rome Municipal Gas company.

Complaints against the service rendered by the Rome company and also complaints that the rates charged were too high were filed several weeks ago by Max Meyerhardt, city attorney. The commission postponed action in the case Monday when representatives of the company agreed to maintain good service between now and the time of the hearing in Rome January 16.

Kaiser Weak, But With Overwhelming Pride, Declares Viviani

Superficial Character of Wilhelm's Make-Up Recognized by Father

Eagerly Assumed Role of Supreme War Chief and Even Relegated God to Position Of Co-Ruler.

By RENE VIVIANI

Premier of France When the War Broke Out

Copyright, 1922, for The Constitution.

HOW WILLIAM II PREPARED FOR HIS LIFE WORK

What he (the kaiser) loved in army life was the book of regulations, the little things, the parading, the stiff carriage, the horseback riding, the glistening uniforms on the radiant days when reviews were held. He shows himself a stickler for extreme punctuality to a degree which led him often into being ridiculous. On the morning of his marriage he must needs go away to bestow a decoration upon a non-commissioned officer at Potsdam.

He inflicted the military pose even upon his family circle. Once he paraded his children before his grandfather in the uniform of the artillery—even the littlest of them, only 18 months old, was there as a corporal. At the word of command, they even had to turn their faces toward old Wilhelm.

In addressing his troops he never failed to glorify the military ideal and to recall warlike virtues. "Cultivate the sentiment of absolute fidelity toward the supreme war chief," he said. "That is your first duty." Always he identified the army with himself, the nation with himself, all Germany with himself. Always he provided the spectacle of a human being who, though lacking the privilege of genius (which, in any case, is no excuse for megalomania), persisted in trying to absorb into himself an entire nation which had inherited a great tradition. He said also: "We belong to each other; the army and I were born for each other; and we shall remain bound to each other by an indissoluble tie, no matter whether the will of God gives us peace or storms."

OBSSESSED WITH DIVINE MISSION.
The will of God! Not only did he identify himself with the nation which, after all, was made up of men like him—though he, in his greatness, held them in contempt—but he identified himself even with God. God was his colleague. He invoked Him at all hours, every day, in his palace, on horseback, pen in hand, elaborating the idea of religion by coupling it with low theatricalism. As has been said of God that he created the world in six days and rested on the seventh, that is untrue. On the seventh day he was preparing the divine clay from which this extraordinary soul was manufactured. God even held himself at Wilhelm's disposal for inflicting his punishments upon those who might annoy His representatives on earth. Assuredly, this was a form of madness—William was obsessed with his divine mission.

A champion of the Germanic race, he devoted himself heart and soul to this mission. He cordially welcomed all willing to help him in accomplishing his task, but "I shall crush those who seek to thwart me." Never did he pause to reflect that his mission, if divine, required moderation. Another man, who possessed culture and education, character and a lofty mind, a man touched with the light of genius, Walter Rathenau, wrote: "William fell short of greatness because he had not based his character on unshakable will-power; he fell short of genius because he lacked sound and deep judgment and soaring imagination. Finally—and this is the most essential point of all—he never overcame the habit of thinking about his own ego."

WILLIAM'S LACK OF REAL WILL.
Absence of matured and persevering will-power, lack of judgment and real intelligence, overwhelming vanity and immense pride—these are the traits which have made of William a being essentially different from his great ancestors. Yet he delighted in saying:

"In me, as in my ancestor (the Great Elector) there is an inflexible will, and, despite all opposition, I shall keep unwaveringly to the path which I have decided upon as the right path."

But never did he have either that

"inflexible will" or that persistent energy which, striving always toward the same goal, made it possible for Frederick II, William I and Bismarck to carry out their plans.

He copied their attitude, to be sure, but, at bottom, he was pitifully weak; his was "weakness which could not do without support," as Rathenau remarks. As fickle in his desires as in his admirations and antipathies, he was correctly judged in childhood by his grandfather, when the latter said:

"He is a young man full of tricks, and he will give plenty of work to those who undertake to train him." Also—not only to them. The young man full of tricks became the man of theatrical coups, of brutal and thoughtless decisions, of obstinacy born of boundless pride; he became the man who despises other men—who, to be sure, certainly repays him in kind. And in all this he shows signs of incurable weakness.

HOW HIS FATHER GAUGED HIM.

His fantastic ways likewise betrayed his lack of judgment. When it was proposed to initiate him, at the age of 27, into affairs of state, his father, Prince Frederick, who had correctly estimated the intellectual capacities of his son wrote to Bismarck:

"His general culture is full of gaps and he lacks genuine depth. This lack of maturity and the inexperience in my son, combined with his tendency toward exaggeration, make me feel that it would be dangerous to allow him to concern himself, at present, with foreign affairs. Alas! He did concern himself with them when he had passed his 50th birthday, and he showed himself even more incompetent and arbitrary. Prince Frederick had foreseen everything about his son, who acted unworthily toward his father even after the latter's death—everything except that this son would cause the massacre of millions of men! He must not be allowed to concern himself with foreign affairs!"

Limited in his culture, brilliant and superficial in conversation, seeking to astonish visitors by his knowledge, brushing up on a subject the day before he wished to amaze some foreign personage, but incapable of talking on that subject five minutes without becoming absurd, he never was the realization of any one complete type. It may be objected that love of parading had been instilled into him from the cradle. Granted—but he carried it to the point of madness. Bismarck saw clearly when he said:

"He is a man who would like to have a birthday every day, or solemn processions, or receptions, or parades, and, in his haughtiness, the role of the world's arbiter would be to his liking."

His thirst for domination has been the most powerful motive force underlying William's actions. The craving to be the only master made him dismiss Bismarck shortly after his accession to the throne; the desire to be master of the world was to cause him to unchain the most horrible of wars.

Long before his accession to the throne his ambitions and arbitrary character had made itself clearly apparent; his unworthy conduct with relation to his father is but another illustration of his.

IMPATIENCE TO REIGN.
On the occasion of his first journey to San Remo, in November, 1887, he certainly did not conceal his impatience to reign. He behaved like an heir expectantly watching the last moments of his parent. Among the members of that family which had about it so little of the Prussian he never ceased extolling the qualities of Prince Bismarck, a man without a peer. This lack of consideration was habitual with William II. He did not leave San Remo until a consultation had been held which left no doubt as to the incurable nature of the crown prince's ailment. In May he made a second journey to San Remo, and he returned to Berlin just in time to be present when his grandfather breathed his last.

When Frederick had become emperor, he was able, by a supreme effort, to return to Germany, where he was to reign only three months, in the course of which young William made a speech comparing the throne, again distinguished himself by tactless actions. At a banquet in honor of the chancellor, William made a speech comparing the empire to a regiment whose colonel (William I) had fallen, and whose lieutenant-colonel (Frederick III.) still kept his saddle, though badly wounded, and he wound up his speech by acclaiming the chancellor the standard-bearer, exclaiming: "Let him march ahead; he will follow him!" A few weeks later, on June 15, 1888, Frederick III. expired. William hastened to put a cordon of troops around the palace where he had died in order to be able to devote himself, in complete security, to going through the papers of the deceased. It appears, even, that certain letters enlightened William as to the opinion of him which his father held, and that the correspondents of Emperor Frederick had no cause for congratulating themselves upon this discovery.

On the day of the funeral William played his part like a naughty actor, prying upon himself, as he passed, the applause of the crowd. Then came the celebrations and ceremonies of his accession to the throne, amid unprecedented pomp and display, amid an orgy of proclamations to the German people, the army and the navy, amid declarations and speeches.

GERMANY ACCLAIMS YOUNG EMPEROR.
At last he was to reign, since death, which had twice listened blindly to his prayer, had opened the way to his frenzied ambition. He had escaped from family influence, grown up in the poisoned air of chauvinism, climbed to that height where autocracy dares not speak. In a paroxysm of madness that followed the quiet years after the war of 1870, the new generation, gorged on the booty of victory, having reached the uttermost limit of collective insanity, acclaimed its young emperor.

And he, with light step, holding himself proudly erect, head high and looking about him insolently, seated himself in the place left by an old man and, after him, by a sick man whom pity had surrounded with care and whom oblivion now shrouded.

The new ruler's youth, his bragging, which aped valor—as we saw in 1918—the contrast between him and those who had departed in disgrace on account of their age and mode of life, and, above all, the presence, at the celebration, of the colonel who had fashioned with his hands, covered with blood and mire yet indelible, the unity of Germany—all these things excited the German nation and reassured it at the same time. What say those who remember all this to themselves? And we, the victims, what can we say? We shall see.

occasions; possibly more, now forgotten in the passing of the years.

Perhaps the most notable of all was the time George Behan tried in vain for the right combination to make him a star of the legitimate stage and chose Atlanta as the place to make his initial bid.

It was notable because Behan had long been a star in vaudeville, his playing being a most delightful offering.

One day he started remodeling it into a complete play, ready for a long stay in the Ellysium of all actors—Broadway.

It was an opportune moment. Klaw and Erlanger on the one side and the Shuberts on the other were in the midst of a mighty battle for the booking rights of all the houses of the biggest cities, outside of New York.

The Shuberts had drawn first blood, getting possession of the Grand theater, which for years had been booked by Klaw & Erlanger.

For a year the attractions of the latter firm were housed in the old Orpheum theater on Marietta street. In the meantime, Shubert plays did well at the Grand.

Good attractions were wanted by both sides and so George Behan was selected to present his premiere—"The Sign of the Rose" he called it—as the opening attraction of the Klaw & Erlanger home, leased from Joel Hurt, owner of the property.

To the Atlanta theater, George Behan brought a perfectly balanced cast with several real stars, and it was a great audience he faced the first night. The applause was all that could be asked and the heart of Behan warmed to the clapping of hands.

The critics were kind. Sidney Ormond, now gone to the last resting place, then an authority in Atlanta on theatrical subjects, wrote The Constitution's criticism in a most eulogistic mood.

But New York refused it. There were too many tears, too few laughs. Within a few weeks "The Sign of the Rose" had ceased to be.

Years ago Grace George, then starting in that delightful play, "Divorçons," came to the Grand to try a plan on the "dog." She played "Divorçons" at all performances but one and at that she tried out her new production. It did not come up to the expectations of William Brady, who was here for the premiere.

Later Thomas Dixon brought one of his plays to Atlanta to try it here—but it never came up to "The Klansman." The production was "The Sign of the Father," as I remember it, with Dixon playing the leading role.

Then Willard Patterson was queried and called to mind still another premiere. It was the first night of "Foes of the Storm Country," now a big hit in pictures. Emory Huntington was the star. It was played at the Lyric and Rupert Hughes, author and playwright, was here to see the production.

Here's luck to Bennett. May she have better success than her predecessors.

pletely destroyed the building occupied by the Georgia Brick company, on the Commerce road near the Sandy creek bridge. The damage was estimated at $40,000 by H. H. Hinton, who, with B. C. Wilson, owns the plant.

Mr. Hinton stated Monday night the plant will be rebuilt immediately. The fire, in the opinion of Mr. Hinton, was caused by sparks from an electric motor which furnished the power to operate the cars used in hauling brick through the dry kiln.

PLAN COMMUNITY XMAS TREE IN ROME

Rome, Ga., December 18.—(Special.)—The Rome community Christmas tree which will give pleasure and enjoyment to more than 500 of the city's poor is being promoted by the Rome women to aid the local Salvation Army post, with the idea of having the 500 members of the Woman's Building association contribute from ten cents up to make the contributions 100 per cent strong.

The Rome Woman's building and the Kiwanis clubs are thus far the only two local organizations that are behind the Salvation Army's efforts to have a real community Christmas tree this year in Rome. The Rotary club gives scores of Christmas baskets to the poor every year and so cannot be expected to aid the community Christmas tree fund.

REJECTED BRIDE ASKS VINDICATION

Mrs. Peggy Lanier Is In Macon Preparing to File Suit Today Against Laniers.

Macon, Ga., December 18.—(Special.)—Peggy Lanier came to Macon today seeking vindication, not money, she told reporters who called on her in the office of Attorney Oliver Hancock, her local counsel.

Mrs. Lanier came to Macon for the purpose of attesting to the allegations set forth in two petitions which will be filed in Bibb superior court tomorrow. One is a suit for alimony and the other asks for $50,000 damages from Dr. J. D. Lanier, father of Peggy's husband, Sidney Lanier.

"Dr. Lanier has encouraged his son to be a coward," said Mrs. Lanier to reporters. "If he had let the boy alone I think he would have done the right thing. If Sidney had a spark of manhood in him he would have lived with me after begging and finally persuading me to marry him. There are plenty of ways to live and support a wife. There were plenty of ways for him to do it and he did it in him. I would have lived with him and helped him, even if he hadn't had any better job than one behind a soda fountain. I would have got a job for him if he hadn't been able to get one."

Mrs. Lanier reiterated her statement that she wants vindication chiefly. "Dr. Lanier," she said, "seems to think I want his money solely."

The rejected bride was accompanied to Macon by Miss Mary Jane Allen, of Atlanta, and Mrs. James Dodgen, wife of Attorney Dodgen, of Atlanta, one of Mrs. Lanier's counsel. Mrs. Dodgen will act as stenographer. They expect to return to Atlanta tomorrow.

Asked today if all differences could be adjusted would she go back to Sidney Lanier, the young bride said: "I don't believe that a settlement will be reached. They have gone too far and I don't think they want to settle. I think Sidney is too much under the influence of his father. I hope you won't ask me if I still love him. I don't know. Some times—"

Her voice trailed off and if she spoke the rest her words were inaudible.

Mrs. Lanier let it be known that her first name is not Peggy. "Of course, you know Peggy is just a nickname. My real name is Delva Gravelley Lewis."

Detectives Speed Madly in Answer To Murder Alarm

Find Sleeping Beauty in Alleged State of Absolute Intoxication.

Miss Thelma DuBoise, pretty young Atlanta woman, who created a sensation about a year ago, when, covered with blood from several wounds on her face and body, she staggered to the door of a farm house in DeKalb county and told a story of having been held up and assaulted by an unidentified highwayman, is again in the limelight of police circles.

About 10:30 o'clock Monday night police headquarters were notified by an excited voice on the telephone that a woman was murdered and her body left on the back seat of a deserted automobile parked on Central avenue at Rawson street.

Detectives Brown and Hornsby sped to the scene in an automobile and found the "bloody murder" slightly exaggerated. On the rear seat of an automobile, belonging to a Mr. Stephens, of 23 Elmwood street, entirely oblivious to her chilly surroundings, the detectives found Miss DuBoise enjoying a hearty nap.

After considerable effort they finally succeeded in arousing her and she was escorted to the police station to resume her "sweet slumber." The woman appeared in a state of absolute intoxication, according to officers, and incoherently gave her name, but refused to divulge her address.

Mr. Stephens informed the detectives that he had experienced trouble with his machine and had left it to obtain assistance from a garage nearby.

Police are of the opinion that the woman while en route to her place of residence saw the deserted automobile and clambered into it for a nap.

On the occasion of her experience with the alleged highwayman in DeKalb county several persons who are said to have been companions of Miss DuBoise on a "wild party" the same night were arrested, and police claim the story of the assault and robbery was fictitious.

GLADYS HANSON GRANTED DIVORCE DECREE MONDAY

White Plains, N. Y., December 18.—Gladys Hanson Cook, actress, was granted an interlocutory decree of divorce Monday from Charles E. Cook, theatrical advertising agent.

Justice Morschauser decided in her favor after Cook appeared before him and confessed undue intimacy with a young woman in a New York hotel last August.

ROME MASONS PLAN TO ENLARGE TEMPLE

Rome, Ga., December 18.—(Special.)—Plans have been announced by the committees having the matter in charge for enlarging and improving the Masonic temple located on the corner of Cherokee lodge, No. 66, during the coming spring. The second floor now occupied by offices probably will be converted into a ladies' parlor, library and headquarters for a Masonic club. The lodge room, located on the third floor, will be enlarged and beautified in many ways.

The plan is to make the Cherokee lodge building headquarters for Masonry in north Georgia and steps toward this end may be initiated at the meeting of the lodge Tuesday evening when the annual election of officers will be held and when home coming night is to be featured.

The meeting gives every indication of being largely attended. The lodge now exceeds in point of numbers any other in this section of the state outside the very large cities with 550 members on the rolls.

REV. MORGAN SPENDS HOLIDAYS IN ATHENS

Athens, Ga., December 18.—(Special.)—Dr. G. Campbell Morgan, internationally known divine, formerly of London, Eng., whose home now is in Athens, has arrived in the city and will spend the Christmas holidays with the members of his family here.

Dr. Morgan just recently completed a Bible conference in Atlanta. During the fall months he has conducted Bible conferences all over the United States and also in Nova Scotia.

After the holidays, Dr. Morgan will go to the Pacific coast, where he will conduct a series of conferences.

FIREWORKS DECLARED ILLEGAL IN GRIFFIN

Griffin, Ga., December 18.—(Special.)—Chairman J. W. Gresham of the city commissioners has issued a proclamation prohibiting fireworks being shot within the fire limits. This precaution is taken in order to prevent conflagrations in that section. Fireworks will be allowed further out in the residence section, however.

BATTLE IS WAGED ON SHIPPING BILL

Supporters Clash With Alliance of Opponents and Proponents of Agricultural Measure.

BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS.

Washington, December 18.—Supporters of the administration shipping bill and members of an alliance between opponents of the measure and proponents of the Norris agricultural financing bill struggled for dominance in the senate today without definite results.

The issue, which was before the senate throughout the session, was embodied in the motion of Senator Norris, of Nebraska, chairman of the agriculture committee and a leader in the new progressive bloc, to lay aside the ship bill and to take up the senator's own measure to create a government-capitalized agency to buy and sell farm products. The question was the subject of numerous conferences and several speeches.

An attempt was made soon after the session began to obtain unanimous consent for a vote on the motion tomorrow and appeared on the point of success, but a wrangle over detail blocked the way. Renewed efforts are to be made tomorrow with prospects favoring a vote before adjournment.

—Seek to Shelve Bill.

Demand that the shipping bill be laid aside was made during the session by Senator Brookhart, republican, Iowa; Senator Borah, republican, Idaho, and Senator Fletcher, of Florida, leader of the democratic opposition to the measure. Senator Ransdell, democrat, Louisiana, in a four-hour speech, urged prompt passage of the legislation, while Senator Jones, republican, Washington, in charge of it, stood firmly on his determination to keep the bill before the senate until rural credit legislation could be reported to the senate by the banking and currency committee. Chairman McLean, of this committee, announced during the day that such action might be expected early next week.

One senator, John Sharp Williams, democrat, Mississippi, announced he would not vote either way on the question, because he said he would "it was within the realm of human ingenuity to frame a bill worse than the ship subsidy bill," but that Senator Norris by his measure "had accomplished the impossible."

Senator Borah urged casting aside of the ship bill in favor of agricultural relief as a matter of justice, declaring that "ship subsidy can wait" until the next session of congress, but that the American farmer with another crop season approaching, could not wait. He warned his republican colleagues that they "had trifled long enough with that seven million majority" and asserted that if rural credit legislation and measures to relieve the agricultural situation were slighted the republican party in the next election would "not have enough votes to count."

Fillbuster He Asserts.

Senator Brookhart, in his maiden speech, declared advocacy by the administration of "the passage of the shipping bill to the practical exclusion of agricultural legislation" was a filibuster against the sovereign voice of the American people, as expressed in the recent election.

"The issues in this case are so great and the subject of such vital and urgent importance to the farmers of the United States," continued Senator Brookhart, "that I shall fight this filibuster to the utmost."

Passage of the shipping bill could be justified as an act of national defense if on no other grounds, Senator Ransdell declared in his speech in which he detailed the commercial need of a strong merchant marine and attacked British opposition to the measure, as expressed in the British press, as "an attempt to dictate American legislation."

What Two Women Did To Their Kitchen

It happens one is an artist and the other a sound sensed business woman. The first thing they did, before they did a single thing else, was to make the kitchen handy.

One knew exactly how to use Mello-Gloss for the walls and Linduro Enamel for the woodwork, to create an atmosphere of happiness; the other, how best to arrange things so they could do the most in the least time and with least effort. (You can do the same with yours.)

It's now a full-fledged woman's kitchen, arranged by two women who "do their own work."

They tell exactly how they did it, in a book they have recently written and called "The House That Is."

It's really a peep into every room of an unusual home from which you will surely get some decidedly practical help hints.

takes this opportunity to extend a most cordial invitation to the Butchers and Market-men of Atlanta to inspect the Grand Champion Prize Winning cattle and hogs purchased by Mr. W. H. White, Jr., at the 6th Annual Fat Stock Show, held in Nashville last week.

We will keep "open house" Wednesday and Thursday of this week, Dec. 20th and 21st, during which time an opportunity will be given to inspect this stock, which has been especially dressed for the holiday trade, and now hanging in our large packing house coolers.

We acquired all the car load lots of the prize winning cattle and hogs, comprising five car loads of each, and including the car lot champions of the cattle and hogs and bought in competition with all of the leading packers of the country.

No finer specimens ever hung on cooler rails than these, and will prove nothing short of a privilege for the consumers of Atlanta to buy this choice meat.

Butchers and market men should take early advantage of making their selections and be in a position to supply their trade with the choicest cuts of beef and pork ever before offered on any market.

Consumers should place orders promptly with their dealers for the needed supplies of these delicious roasts, steaks, and other cuts for the holiday menus, and specify "Grand Champion" quality.

GAY OPERA SEASON IN PROSPECT HERE

Colonel Peel Brings Glowing Reports of Metropolitan on Return From New York City.

From a standpoint of art, from a social viewpoint and financially, the 1923 season of grand opera promises to be the most brilliant and successful ever presented here, it was learned Monday from officers of the Atlanta Music Festival association including Colonel W. L. Peel, president, who has just returned from New York where he closed the contract for opera next year.

Predictions of this brilliant and successful season are made by Colonel Peel and the officials after consulting with the directors of the Metropolitan Opera company and after Colonel Peel had attended grand opera in New York last week and had heard Mme. Jeritza, the season's sensation, sing in the new production of "Thais."

Greatest Singers Ever Here. "The Metropolitan Opera company is going to bring to Atlanta next year the greatest array of singers ever brought to the south or that has ever been heard in opera anywhere," Colonel Peel said Monday.

"The program to be offered here next spring will please beyond the shadow of a doubt," he continued. "Three of the operas will be sung here for the first time. In the list is 'William Tell,' which massive production should be one of the most popular of the season. 'The Merry Widow' will sing twice, once in 'Tosca' and again in 'Thais.' I heard her sing in both these operas in New York last week. I don't believe any singer ever received the ovation she received in New York with the possible exception of the great Caruso."

Colonel Peel also witnessed the Metropolitan company's production of "Romeo and Juliet" which will be one of the operas to be sung here for the first time next year.

"Mme. Bori and Gigli are the stars in this opera and their work is splendid. The music, the settings, the costumes were beyond description," he said.

Possibility May Come. It was intimated by Colonel Peel that there is a possibility that Rosa Ponselle, the popular prima donna who scored such a big success here last season, will be added to the list of stars to be brought here in the spring.

Colonel Peel could not say for certain that Miss Ponselle would be brought to Atlanta next year but said negotiations with this end in view are under way.

Additional subscriptions not yet published in The Constitution were made public as follows:

Lee Ascher, $200; Chamberlain-Johnson-DuRose Co., additional, $325; A. Anderson, $200; James A. Gough, $250; B. Joel, $200; Jesse Draper, $200; H. M. Atkinson, additional, $1,500; Paul F. Ex-Slaves Need Christmas Help From Atlantans

"Negro Mammies" and "Old Black Joe" Objects of Charity.

Do you remember the faithful old mammy who crooned tuncful and wiled negro melodies to you when you were a child? The same old mammy stayed with your family until you were grown, married and had little ones around you, who in their turn received the care of this old negro? Does not the old southern melody, "Old Black Joe," strike a responsive chord somewhere inside of you?

All that is left today of those faithful servants are just a few here and there, most of them bent almost double, too feeble to work, but still willing. Like the "Wearers of the Grey," they are fast disappearing, and soon the only thing that will remind us of their existence will be an occasional minstrel which is not complete without the old-fashioned plantation negro, the negro Mammy and the characteristic "Old Black Joe."

The Ex-Slave Association of Atlanta is in need of funds this Christmas to spread joy among the ex-slaves of this city. Not only to bring a little bit of cheer into the faithful old hearts, but to give them a little of the world's goods to sustain livelihood. The object of the association is to see that none of the ex-slaves shall suffer for the necessities of life.

Donations are asked. It can be money, just a few groceries, an old coat or pair of trousers, a wool dress or a pair of shoes. A half of a ton of coal will go a long way toward keeping some of them warm during the present winter.

The ex-slaves are not many, and the donations need not be large, say those at the head of the association, but the need is urgent, and the generous people of Atlanta are being asked to hear the appeal.

Donations of all kinds can be sent to the Ex-Slave association headquarters, 328 North street, or a call at 1234 will bring solicitors for the donations.

Delta Tau Deltas Meet. The Delta Tau Delta fraternity of the southeast will hold its annual meeting at the Georgian Terrace on January 5 and 6, instead of during the latter part of December as formerly planned. It was announced by the secretary, H. B. Roberts, through the Convention Bureau Monday.

GEORGIA LEADS U. S. IN DRY ENFORCEMENT

2,144 Stills and 24,278 Gallons of Booze Destroyed in Year.

In suppression of dry violations and enforcement of the national prohibition laws under the direction of Fred D. Dismuke, for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1922, Georgia ranks first of all states in the union in all around general efficiency, according to reports from national headquarters, made public Monday.

Comparative results in dry law enforcement of the various states contained in the report show Georgia leading in the number of stills destroyed, gallons of whiskey confiscated, amount of fermented mash destroyed, value of property seized, and number of still-worms captured. In the number of arrests and prosecutions, Georgia with a total of 2,628 is listed in third place, exceeded only by the states of New York, with 8,775, and California with 3,204.

A total of 2,144 illicit stills were destroyed in Georgia during the year. North Carolina with a total of 1,566 coming second. In the number of gallons of whiskey destroyed Georgia with 24,278, more than doubled the total quantity destroyed in California, which destroyed a total of 10,007 gallons. Approximately 1,639,643 gallons of fermented mash, or beer, was destroyed in Georgia during the year, North Carolina coming second with 1,174,162 gallons.

The estimated value of property seized by the Georgia officers is placed at $511,477.34. North Carolina with a total of $417,299.15 was second.

Attributing the splendid record of his department to the relentless vigilance of his assistants, Director Dismuke expressed satisfaction at the showing made by the Georgia forces and declared his department was composed of individuals who were more conscientious and efficient than any other force in the country.

"The record made by the Georgia department," stated Mr. Dismuke, "stands out as an unusual achievement in view of the limited number of agents in this state. There are only 28 men attached to the local department, whereas New York has approximately 250 and North Carolina 60 men."

Expansion of Asia And Russia to Aid Europe, Says Banker

George W. Edwards, professor of banking, of Columbia university, and educational director of the American Institute of Banking, was in Atlanta Monday attending a conference of officials and directors of the institute. Professor Edwards is making a survey of banking conditions in the southern territory.

"Europe will pull through," said Professor Edwards when asked for his opinion of conditions over there. "It will take time, of course, but Europe will eventually straighten out her affairs. Her condition now is very much the same as the condition of the south immediately following the civil war."

"Europe, of course, is an industrial system, whereas the south was largely agricultural. An industrial system will require longer to reconstruct, but it will be done."

"In the instance of the south and the north, following the civil war, the reconstruction was rushed ahead through expansion to the west. Rapid development of the west pulled both sections of our country out of the difficulties brought on by the war."

"Today in Europe, faced as they are by the same relative conditions as we were a half century ago, there is the same parallel in Russia and Central Asia as the west afforded us. Expansion and development in these fields will aid Europe through reconstruction the same as development aided the west and America through civil war reconstruction."

Each of five department stores in Paris last year did a business equivalent in American money to $100,000,000 or more.

No Snow to Fall This Christmas, Weatherman Says

Unusually Warm Weather Is Preceding the Holidays This Year.

It is not likely that Atlanta will have snow at Christmas this year, in the opinion of C. F. von Herrmann, of the local weather bureau office. At present Christmas day is too far distant for the weather forecast to make a prediction as to the condition at that time, but Mr. von Herrmann stated that it was not likely to be snowy at Christmas in view of the records of very little cold weather here before Christmas in years past.

More rain Tuesday with a probable minimum temperature of 30 degrees in the early morning was the forecast for Atlanta issued Monday. Fair weather probably will continue through the middle of the week, states the forecast, but more rain is scheduled for the latter part of the week.

Thus far Atlanta has had a temperature of 8 degrees higher every day than the normal for December weather, and the low temperature recorded does not go to the November record of 28 degrees.

Fair and moderately cold weather may prevail on Christmas day in Atlanta according to Mr. von Herrmann. "We can't tell much about it yet," said Mr. von Herrmann. "There is nothing to indicate whether Christmas will be rainy or fair. The forecast for the week mentions rain the latter part of this week, but Christmas day comes next week, so we can't base a prediction of a rainy Christmas day on this forecast. It is entirely possible that we may have fair weather on Christmas, but I don't think there is any possibility of our having any severely cold weather until after Christmas."

Rain falling in Atlanta Monday brought a drop in temperature, and further north the distance was causing precipitation in the form of snow. A cold wave was reported to the north, but a storm centering over the eastern portion of the Gulf of Mexico was causing the cloudy, rainy weather in the southern states and this storm was expected to prevent any severely cold weather from reaching Atlanta.

LAWYERS OF STATE JOIN IN TRIBUTE TO MAJOR CUMMING

Tribute to the memory of the late Major Joseph B. Cumming, of Augusta, was paid in the supreme court Monday by prominent lawyers of the state and representatives of various bar associations of Georgia including the state bar association.

Judge Enoch H. Callaway, of Augusta, read a review of the life and achievements of Major Cumming which was prepared by a committee of the Augusta bar.

Others who delivered brief eulogies were Judge George Hillyer, Atlanta; General A. R. Lawton, Savannah, and Judge James K. Hines, of the supreme court.

In his speech Judge Hines said: "He was an able, effective and eloquent advocate. To an impressive and charming personality and bearing there was added ability; and to ability, there was added a high and spotless character; and this combination rendered him a formidable and almost invincible foe. He had a high sense of the dignity and honor of the legal profession. He unwaveringly stood by its ethics, and did his best to uphold them. He spurred the tendency of the times to commercialize the practice of law."

In his death this court has lost one of its chief ornaments, and the legal profession one of its best and most distinguished members. As such, his memory will be cherished by this court and by the members of the legal fraternity."

FUNERAL TODAY FOR C. P. AIKEN, NOTED EDUCATOR

Interment will be in West View cemetery. Dr. S. R. Belk and Rev. C. H. Meeks will officiate.

Associates Pay Honor To Hamilton Douglas As Funeral Is Held

Funeral services for Hamilton Douglas, 80, prominent Atlanta attorney, who died Sunday at his home, 2525 Peachtree road, were held Monday afternoon at the Liberal Christian church.

Rev. John W. Rowland officiated and interment was made in West View cemetery. Six members of the faculty of the Atlanta Law school, of which Mr. Douglas was dean and one of the founders, were pallbearers. They were Hooper Alexander, Wharton O. Wilson, Robert S. Parker, H. W. Jones, Philip Weltner and George H. Gillon.

Honorary escorts from the Atlanta Bar association, the Burns club and the grand lodge of the Knights of Pythias attended the services.

All Fulton county courts, with the exception of one division of municipal court, adjourned Monday as a mark of respect to Mr. Douglas.

Dixie Highway Draws Majority of Tourists, Says Association Head

Florida records show that 90 per cent of the automobile tourists so far this year are from states traversed by the Dixie highway, according to W. J. Jones, advertising manager of the Dixie Highway association.

"This shows the vast importance of this national highway," said Mr. Jones, and "also that season tourists can cross the mountains of Tennessee and Kentucky with greater ease than formerly. Work has begun that will eventually make a good road all the way."

DETECTIVES TO AID U. S. IN GUARDING HEAVY XMAS MAIL

Precautions against possible theft of holiday mail were taken Monday by Postmaster E. K. Large and Mayor James L. Key, in conjunction with Police Chief Beavers, who has assigned a detachment of city detectives to assist postal inspectors in guarding the large volume of mail packages and letters.

Never in the history of Atlanta has there been such a large quantity of mail heaped into the local office during the holiday period, according to Mr. Large. Last Sunday a total of 27 trucks were kept busy all day delivering parcels to residents of the city, the postmaster declared. Only six truck loads of mail were delivered the corresponding Sunday last year.

The increase this year is unprecedented in every department, according to veteran employees of the postoffice. An appeal by Mr. Large to the populace of Atlanta was forthcoming Monday urging that packages and other mail be posted during the first of the week so as not to swamp the postoffice the latter part of the week.

STEGEMAN RESIGNS AS HEAD COACH AT GEORGIA

"Steg" Will Have Charge Of New Physical Culture Department at University

"Kid" Woodruff's Name Mentioned in Rumors Concerning Coach to Be Picked to Succeed Stegeman—Board Meets Soon.

Philadelphia, December 18.—John W. Heisman, whose contract as head coach of the University of Pennsylvania football squad expired this fall, is not a candidate for reappointment. He has been engaged as assistant to the chairman of the council on athletics.

In making this announcement tonight, S. E. Hutchinson, chairman of the athletic council, said that the football committee was entirely satisfied with Mr. Heisman's work on the field and what he had done to "regain for Pennsylvania its position in the football world." He added that Mr. Heisman, who had been head coach for the last three years, had informed the committee this fall that he did not desire the position again.

"At the last meeting of the council on athletics," said Mr. Hutchinson's statement, "authorization was given to me as chairman to engage Mr. Heisman as assistant to the chairman of the council. In this position Mr. Heisman will continue the organization work he has carried on so successfully in addition to his coaching."

Mr. Hutchinson said the committee plans to canvass the coaching situation thoroughly, and as soon as possible to recommend a coaching policy and a coaching personnel, "which we feel will meet with approval."

Athens, Ga., December 18.—(Special.)—Coach Herman J. Stegeman, for the past three years in charge of athletics at the University of Georgia, has resigned.

The announcement of the resignation, which was tendered Dr. S. V. Sanford, faculty director of athletics, Monday afternoon, was made at a banquet given for the 1922 football team by the business men of the city at the Y. M. C. A. Monday night.

Coach Stegeman made the announcement when he was called on for a speech by Toastmaster T. S. Mell. The resignation is to be effective at once.

Coach Stegeman, however, will not sever connections with the university. He stated that he had been offered and had accepted a position as associate professor and head of the department of physical culture.

The move has been anticipated by university officials, it is said, as Dr. Sanford stated last night that the new head football coach had been decided upon by the athletic board and would in all probability, be announced soon.

It is thought that Coach Stegeman will still assist in the training of Georgia gridiron teams. Though his new position does not compel it, the senior was earnestly requested to do this by the other coaches, Captain Bennett and members of the team at the conclusion of the banquet.

The banquet, arranged by business men of Athens in honor of the Bulldogs, proved to be a brilliant event, although a pall of disappointment was cast over the gathering when the announcement of the Stegeman resignation was made.

While no official announcement has as yet been made, it is thought that George (Kid) Woodruff, of Columbus, former Red and Black grid star, will succeed Stegeman.

Stegeman's Record. "Steg," as he is known to thousands of southern fans who have watched his work with the Bulldogs, came to Athens in the spring of 1919 for the purpose of taking charge of intra-mural sports at the University. After he had been in this position for a very short time, he was asked by Dr. Sanford to take charge of the baseball team, which at that time was without a coach. A successful season resulted.

His first fling at coaching Georgia football teams came in the fall of 1918, when he was given a contract as assistant to Coach Alex Cunningham. Stegeman was chiefly responsible for developing that season a splendid line, as it was over the line that the Bulldogs won their first game, a 10-0 victory over the University of Georgia. Stegeman's record as a coach is as follows: 1918-19, 10-0-1; 1919-20, 10-0-1; 1920-21, 10-0-1; 1921-22, 10-0-1.

GOLF SCHOOL IS PLANNED

Clem House, an Atlanta golf professional, plans to open a golf school in Atlanta at the first of next year.

It is his plan to conduct the school on the plan of a club, and membership fee will be $6.00. This fee will entitle the member to two lessons a week and practice when available.

The school will be equipped with driving, putting and approaching greens, and everything necessary to the beginner in the fundamentals of the game and to keep some of the older heads up to form.

It will be a great aid in keeping the letters in good condition during the winter months when outdoor playing is curtailed to some extent.

No definite location for the school has been decided upon yet.

TALBOT WILL LEAD TULANE

New Orleans, La., December 18.—(Special.)—Harry Talbot, star Tulane football player, has been named captain of the 1923 Tulane Greenbacks at the annual football banquet held at the Pario Royal. Talbot has played for three years on the Tulane line and has been one of the outstanding stars of the team. He would have undoubtedly been one of the selections for the mythical all-southern eleven this season had he been consistent in every game played. Talbot expects to have one of the greatest teams in history under the leadership of the giant Tulane line.

Nineteen men, including the manager, were awarded the coveted "M" at the banquet which was one of the greatest celebrations in the history of the university. The men to receive the "M" for the season were Captain Paul Maloney, ex-Captain Eddie Reed, Captain-elect Harry Talbot, Gene Bergert, Gardner "Hank" Muldoon, "Tex" Dwyer, Blackie, George Tunstall, Harry Gamble, Alfred Brown, Lester Lautenschlager, Monzer, Howard Roehl, Benny Brown, "Lumber" Lamprecht, Jim Allison, Besselman and Manager Nat Marks.

Reed Gets Present.

The team presented ex-Captain Eddie Reed with a gold medal in token of his work. It was with tears in his eyes that he accepted the medal and told them that he would be with Tulane in his struggle to gain supremacy on the gridiron below the Mason-Dixon line.

Coach Shugart, president of the team, was remembered by the team as was Trainer "Mank" Simons, who was presented with a leather handbag by members of the team.

The biggest announcement of the night perhaps was made by Athletic Director Wilbur C. Smith, who stated that 1924 would be the biggest year in the history of local football.

After outlining the difficulties of getting games with representative southern universities, "Doc" Smith announced that the Vanderbilt, Auburn and Tennessee would play the Greenbacks in New Orleans in 1924. The scheduling of such an array of teams for local games means the brightest set of schedules in the history of local football.

Local public has ever been allowed to gaze upon. To arrange the games it was necessary to consent to play the mentioned teams on their home ground in 1924.

Speeches were made by Dr. Bonnie Guthrie, president of the Tulane alumni; Jim Menefee, toastmaster; Muldoon; B. Dwyer, president of the Tulane; Coach Clark D. Shugart; and Captain Paul Maloney. The team gave a cheer for W. R. Ivey who donated the ratio Royal building Tulane university and gave the place for the banquet.

PROMOTERS WAIT CHANGES IN GOTHAM

New York, December 18.—Boxing promoters are holding their punches until after Governor-elect Al Smith puts his new boxing commission into effect.

Although there is no definite clue the personnel of the new commission, it is expected that it will be rather more tolerant and liberal than the present one.

The age limit ruling which barred Jess Willard and the forfeiture of the feather and middleweight titles will be reconsidered and perhaps rescinded.

The "appointment" of Johnnie Dundee to the featherweight championship for his knockout of Danny Frank has never taken hold with the public. Neither was Dave Rosenberg regarded as the middleweight champion, although the present commission proclaimed him as such.

WHITE IS ELIMINATED AS FORMIDABLE FOE

New York, December 18.—Fight experts who saw Charlie White slugged on the chin in the second round of his fight with Ritchie Mitchell at the Garden last Friday night are almost unanimous in eliminating White from consideration as the man to whip Benny Leonard.

It is conceded that White deserves a bout with Leonard for knocking out Mitchell after being in a bad way himself for four rounds. But White was slow and slow with his punches that none of the experts can see him defeating the champion.

Tech Planning Stadium Drive Early in Spring

Athletic Association on the Verge of Breaking Through to the Light in Financial Way.

BY JOHN STATON

The Tech Athletic association, in a financial way, is on the verge of breaking into the clear. You see, from time to time, that noble organization has been heavily pressed by the burden of debt.

It might seem to the casual observer that such a statement contained something which could not strictly be called the truth, but it is simple to show the wherein and why of a financial imbroglio.

There are, and have been for a good many years, three outstanding debts which had to be met in part each year. The first is the payments on Grant field. Mr. Grant gave one-third the total, and it was agreed that Tech as a school should give one-third the Tech Athletic association the other third.

It has been impossible, as the years rolled on, for the school to meet its part of the obligation, so two-thirds of the burden has been forced upon the Athletic association.

Next is the purchase of the lower field. The original purchase included only that ground between the two goal posts. None of the lower field was included. In fact, scarce a hundred yards of length in the original tract, since most of the land lay east and west.

Purchased Lower Field.

The next step of the association was to purchase the lower field, including all the land from the goal line and has been one of the outstanding debts for about ten years, and they are just now being cleared up. But the association is now in possession of one of the most perfect spots for a stadium that can be found anywhere.

Perfectly level, in a natural basin, there is no spot in the southland so worthy of being developed. At a comparatively small cost, there could be erected a stadium on the flats that would be the pride of Atlanta and a big advertisement for the whole south.

The third big imbroglio is the college stands. About eight years ago Tech realized the necessity of building permanent seats for the spectators. Prior to that time, the seats consisted of temporary bleachers strung around the field. Most of the people who attended the games had to line up on fences around the side of the field and stand there for the duration of the game. The stands were not able to follow the game easily due to the mob on the side lines.

Took Big Step.

So the Athletic association took a big step in the right direction, and more on faith than anything else, gave a contract for the permanent stands now on the west side of the field. Getting the money together has been a slow process, but the other pressing obligations. But now, thanks to several good seasons, the stands are nearly paid for.

And even now, the need for additional capacity is as great as it was when the first concrete stands were built. There is an absolute necessity for a place to put all the people who will come to the games if they were assured of having good seats. Many who would attend even the smaller games are kept away by the thought that the best seats are not available and it would be necessary for them to take inferior selections should they attend.

The plan now is to start an active campaign in the spring which shall have as its purpose the erection of a fine concrete stadium around the field. The plan would mean, with favor everywhere, the response to it would be generous and spontaneous.

There are thousands who would subscribe just for the satisfaction of knowing that they could get good seats at the Auburn-Tech game on Thanksgiving day.

News of Society and Woman's Work

"Fernbank" Is Scene of Lovely Golden Wedding

Colonel and Mrs. Z. D. Harrison celebrated their golden wedding anniversary Monday evening at "Fernbank," their lovely Druid Hills home. They were surrounded by their children, who received with them, and were showered with good wishes from distinguished guests and the large family connection who were present. The spacious home, long known for its hospitality, and set on sloping hills in the deep woods beyond the Druid Hills Golf club, was lighted by the soft glow of countless golden candles and decorated with spruce pines and graceful smilax vines. Candles in golden holders gleamed on mantles, tables and bookcases throughout the lower floor. Yellow calendars were the only blossoms used for the floral decorations and made lovely spots of golden color against the dark green of the foliage.

The dining room table, from which supper was served at 8 o'clock, was covered with a handsome lace cover and held in the center a low plateau of golden calendars encircled on the outer edge with fifty golden candles, each holding a golden candle gleaming softly. The white mints which filled the golden bonbonnières used on the table were embossed in golden letters with the monogram of the honored couple.

Old-fashioned dishes of silver held golden wedding cake. Colonel and Mrs. Harrison received their guests in the wide front room at the north of the house. They were surrounded by their sons, Dan Harrison, of Rome, Ga., and Hendrie Harrison, of Pensacola, Fla., and their daughters, Miss Emily Harrison, who is a member of the staff of the School of Technology, of Springfield, Mass.; Miss Fannell Harrison, who has recently received an appointment from Herbert Hoover and will sail after the New Year for Belgium to continue her Red Cross welfare work; Mrs. Michael Hoke and Mrs. Loring Raoul. The little children of Dr. and Mrs. Hoke and of Mr. and Mrs. Raoul assisted in serving.

Supreme Court There.
Judge Marcus Beck, Judge W. H. Fish, Judge J. K. Hines, Judge Price Gilbert, Judge Warner Hill and Judge Samuel Atkinson, the six judges of the supreme court, with their wives, were guests of honor. In recognition of the event they presented Colonel and Mrs. Harrison with a handsome golden lined comports.

The members of the Every Saturday class, of which Mrs. Harrison has been a member since it was founded, twenty-seven years ago, were also special guests. They presented Mrs. Harrison with a wonderful bouquet of golden wedding cypresses tied with golden tulle.

During the day Colonel and Mrs. Harrison were the recipients of countless messages of good will, happiness and many beautiful floral tributes. Colonel Harrison is president of the Georgia Bar association, to which important office he was elected at the summer convention.

For more than fifty years he has been clerk of the supreme court of Georgia. He is loved and honored throughout the state.

Miss Mellon Is Feted Guest Of Miss Jennie Robinson

One of the very attractive guests for the week before Christmas is Miss Mary Ellen Mellon, of Oklahoma City, Okla., who arrived Sunday to visit Miss Jennie Robinson, at her home in Druid Hills. During her stay in Atlanta she will be the recipient of many delightful social affairs.

Mr. and Mrs. J. D. Robinson and Miss Robinson entertained at dinner Monday evening at their home on Ponce de Leon avenue in honor of Miss Mellon.

The house was effectively decorated to carry out the idea of Christmas festivity. Red and green was the color scheme in the dining room where the festively appointed table had as a central decoration a silver basket filled with poinsettias. Encircling this were silver candlesticks holding unshaded red tapers.

Mrs. Robinson wore a handsome black dinner gown.

Miss Mellon was lovely in a beautiful model of blue brocade.

Miss Jennie Robinson's becoming costume was of pink silver cloth trimmed with brown fur.

Miss Emily Robinson wore a striking gown of jade green elaborately trimmed with pearls.

Covers were laid for 12 friends of Miss Robinson.

Esmond Grady will entertain at dinner at the Capital City club Tuesday evening in honor of Miss Mellon.

Miss Mellon will be among those who will receive with Miss Robinson at the debut ball at which she will be presented by her grandfather, Captain James V. English, Thursday evening at the Piedmont Driving club.

Other parties of an informal nature have been planned for this attractive visiting belle.

M. RICH & BROS. COMPANY

'Twas the Night Before Christmas

'Twas the night before Christmas—in Rich's Toytown—
Every beast of the circus, each monkey and clown.
Was talking of what an adventure 'twould be
To find himself hung on a gay Christmas tree.

When all of a sudden they heard such a chatter
They looked all about to see what was the matter.
And—would you believe it?—the mamma dolls all
Had risen straight up from their beds by the wall.

And, right there before the circus folks' eyes,
Were baking brown biscuits and spiced apple pies.
And talked, as they worked, with such rollicking laughter,
The mere echoes shook every window and rafter.

The elephant cried, "Ah, now I foresee
A sumptuous meal is in waiting for me."
And ere he had finished the woolly lamb said,
"I hope they will serve me my supper in bed."

The cats were preparing by washing their faces,
And settling themselves in comfortable places.
While the dogs and the pigs and the cows
Were showing unmannerly customs and hows.

'Twas the impudent clown who just couldn't wait;
And there he discovered the circus' fate.
"At what hour," he asked, "are you planning to serve?"
The circus was breathless—admiring his nerve.

For fully five seconds a dead silence reigned,
And then the doll spokesman a brief reply deigned:
"This food is for children—we've nothing for clowns"—
And each doll from her cookstove frowned terrible frowns.

Until every creature, just lately so glad,
Became most distressingly, hungrily sad;
And simply forgot, in the mamma dolls' scolding,
That in six more hours it would be Christmas morning.

As soon as they all were sleeping again
Along came Santa—that wisest of men—
He quickly took in the whole situation:
The dolls' well-packed lunches, the creatures' starvation.

"I know how to fix it," he cried with great glee,
"That clown should have known he could leave it to me;
The dolls do not know that wherever they go,
I'm planning to carry a circus, also."

"I'd best eat these lunches, myself, I suppose,
I'm hungry enough from that ride, goodness knows;
And I've so many packs to deliver tonight,
I really do need to indulge in a bite."

So when he had eaten a hundred doll pies,
And packed all his sacks, he winked at the skies,
And set out on his travels—and that, dears, is why
Your doll can not bring you a nice Christmas pie.

But if she's from Rich's, I'm sure you will find
She has a most practical, pie-making mind.
And, of course, you will know Santa's slogan
Is right: "RICH'S FOR ALL, MERRY CHRISTMAS, GOOD NIGHT!"

Stone Mountain Association Offers $100 Prize for Song

Announcement is made by the Stone Mountain Memorial association of a prize of $100 to be given for the best song composed about Stone Mountain. The contest opens in January and closes in April. Any southern composer may take part. Miss Nan Stephens, president of the South Atlantic district of the National Federation of Music Clubs and chairman of the program of the bi-annual convention of the federation, which will meet in Asheville in June, is chairman of the contest for the Stone Mountain Memorial association. Miss Stephens will appoint a judge from every section of the south so that every part of the south will be perfectly represented. These judges will be of the highest musical standing and all will be authorities on children's choruses.

The object of the contest is primarily to secure a song which can be used as a chorus song for children and through which children will learn of the meaning of the Stone Mountain memorial.

During the recent convention in Atlanta of the Southern Music Supervisors' association was made of the opening of the contest and was received with the greatest enthusiasm. The contest was also announced at the buffet luncheon which Mrs. Frank Tupper Mason gave at her beautiful home, "Stonehenge," in Druid Hills Saturday for Miss Ella Powell, who has been her guest, and who made a talk on this occasion on the "Psychology and Technique of Song." After the luncheon the several hundred delegates who attended the supervisors' convention motored to Stone Mountain where there was a delightful group of songs given by Miss Margaret Battle and which showed the range of her voice when the huge mountain was used as a sounding board and proved that there is no echo. Because of the possibility of having open-air song festivals at this point it has been proved by frequent tests that the great stone mountain can serve as a splendid background shutting off reverberations and echoes.

At the luncheon at Mrs. Mason's home she was assisted by Miss Powell, Mrs. Lawrence Everhart, Mrs. George Brown, Mrs. W. R. Hoyt, Mrs. Plato Durham, Mrs. Joseph Morgan, Mrs. Joseph M. High, Miss Alice Cole, Miss Nan Stephens, Miss Grace Stephens, Mrs. Charles North and Mrs. Charles T. Phillips.

Mrs. Durham to Give Informal Tea.

An informal tea of Wednesday will be given by Mrs. Plato Durham at her home in Druid Hills, in compliment to her sister, Miss Alice Cole, of Richmond, Va., who is her guest for the holidays.

Assisting Mrs. Durham will be Miss Martha Boynton, Miss Elizabeth Owens, Miss Clara Belle King and Miss Lella Venable Mason.

A small group of the younger set have been invited to meet Miss Cole.

Miss Nichols Weds William Goodman In Marietta

An interesting marriage of Wednesday, December 13, was that of Miss Sabine Alston Nichols, of Marietta, and William Hardin Goodman, of Atlanta, formerly of Knoxville, Tenn. The ceremony was solemnized at the St. James Episcopal church; at 8 o'clock in the evening. Archdeacon William H. Hardin, of Salisbury, N. C., assisted by Rev. R. R. Claiborne, were the officiating ministers.

The ceremony was performed before an improvised altar of stately palms. Large wicker baskets filled with white chrysanthemums placed on either side was the only touch of color. Lighted candles in a candelabra cast a soft glow over the pretty wedding scene.

To the strains of "Lohengrin's Wedding March" the wedding party entered, the ushers entering first, including Henry Cohen, Lewie Sessions, Bayard McIntosh and Randolph Simmonds. Then the groomsmen, who were Thomas Goodman, brother of the groom; John Gill, Ben Miller, Claiborne Anderson.

Robert M. Goodman, brother of the groom, acted as best man.

The bridemaids entered alone, all wearing gowns of turquoise blue crepe satin, trimmed in silver and carrying cascade bouquets of Ophelia roses, showered with parma violets. They included Misses R. Alston, Mary Ellen Law, Constance Cole, Lois Gardner.

Mrs. Howard Harmon, matron of honor, and Miss Sue Nichols, maid of honor, wore gold colored crepe, and their bouquets were Ophelia roses, showered with parma violets.

The bride was preceded by little Sabine Alston Brumby, the flower girl, who wore a hand made frock of flesh colored crepe de chine and carried a basket of pink roses, and Master George G. Nichols, Jr., the ring bearer, who wore a smart white satin suit.

The bride was given in marriage by her brother, Edward A. Nichols, and was lovely in her wedding gown of heavy white crepe satin, embroidered in pearls, and draped on one side and caught with a handsome pearl ornament. A pretty bit of sentiment was the wedding veil, which belonged to her great grandmother. It was cap shape and held to her soft hair with a coronet of pearls. Her bouquet was of bird's roses and valley lilies.

After the ceremony Mrs. Edgar Nichols, mother of the bride, entertained the wedding party and close friends at an informal reception at her home in Marietta.

Mrs. Nichols was gowned in black satin trimmed with black lace. A cascade bouquet of parma violets completed her costume.

Mrs. W. M. Goodman, mother of the groom, assisted in receiving, and her gown was black lace trimmed in jet, and her corsage bouquet was pink roses and valley lilies.

The bride is the daughter of Mrs. Edgar Nichols, of Marietta, and through her charming personality and gracious manner has won countless friends. She is unusually beautiful, and is of the brunette type.

Mr. Goodman is the son of Mr. and Mrs. W. M. Goodman, of Atlanta. He is a prominent business man here and belongs to the social clubs.

Agnes Scott Choir Sings "The Messiah."

The Choral society of Agnes Scott college presented Handel's "Messiah" in the college auditorium Sunday afternoon to a large audience.

Lewis H. Johnson, of the Agnes Scott music department, was the director. Christian W. Diekmann accompanied the singers on the organ. The soloists who assisted were: Miss Margaret Baker Battle, soprano, of the North Avenue Presbyterian church; Miss Eunice Curry, contralto, of All Saints' Episcopal church, and also of the Agnes Scott music department; A. W. Browning, tenor, of Ponce de Leon Baptist church, and Ed A. Werner, bass, of the North Avenue Presbyterian church. The chorus sang beautifully "Hallelujah Chorus" and "All We Like Sheep."

The Agnes Scott Choral society is composed of the college club, a number of Emory students and several members from Atlanta and Decatur.

Much of the success of this presentation of the "Messiah" is due to the interest and ability of Lewis H. Johnson, who has directed this oratorio for the Agnes Scott Choral society for a number of years.

Miss Muse Speaks About Work Of Southern Association

BY GRACE FISCHER.

Work in liberalizing the college entrance requirements will be undertaken during the coming year by the Southern Association of Colleges and Secondary Schools, according to Miss Jessie Muse, principal of the Girls' High school, who attended a conference of the association in New Orleans last week.

This work in changing the requirements for high school students entering college was the most important matter discussed at the meeting of educators, in the opinion of Miss Muse, who when asked about the conference, spoke with keen interest of the association which she says is considered the standardizing agency for schools in the south, and of the cordial reception given the delegates in New Orleans.

"Only accredited colleges and high schools can join the Southern association," said Miss Muse. "And it is quite an honor to belong." She added with a smile as she mentioned that Girls' High has been a member for many years.

Association's Work.

She spoke of how the high schools and colleges in the south work together in this organization to raise the standard of education, and of how the high schools plan their work so that it may fit in easily with the work of the colleges. The association has done much in recent years to standardize high school education, so that the student entering a reputable college—one on the accredited list—may be adequately prepared.

This matter of entrance requirements is what the association, through commissions, will work on during the coming year. Miss Muse is a member of the college commission, composed of 24 college delegates and 13 high school delegates that will look to the college end of the matter. A high school commission, also composed of high school and college delegates, will see to the high school viewpoint. "High school and college delegates work together on each commission," said Miss Muse.

"No that opinion may be correlated and the broader view reached."

"During this next year there will be committees from both commissions," Miss Muse continued, "who will rewrite the college entrance requirements for standard colleges, with the idea of liberalizing them further."

Home Economics.

"How will we make the requirements more liberal? Well, that has not been entirely determined yet. For one thing, though, we plan to accept more work in home economics for entrance units to college. This is really a very liberal step for many of the colleges will not allow home economics to count for entrance. A few institutions like Goucher have never discriminated against high school cooking, but most of them have, in their insistence upon requiring more languages and more science."

"I do not know how requirements in languages will be altered, if at all, but something will probably be done about the classical languages sooner or later. I am especially interested in what Dr. W. L. Carr, of Rochester, N. Y., is doing in this line right now. He is making an investigation to see how much boys and girls really do get out of a study of the classics. We have sent to him from the Girls' High school Latin tests to be measured, and he is getting these from all over the country. With such concrete evidence as these tests measure, we will show, we should be able to act intelligently in this matter," said Miss Muse.

When asked what else about the conference interested her, Miss Muse was quick to reply, "Why, the personal side? What I really went for was to study the relation of the secondary school to the college. Over 300 people were at the conference and by meeting them at close range, as I did at a delightful luncheon given at Newcomb and at a reception at Tulane, I was able to exchange ideas in a manner that was very satisfying. This intimate contact always makes for co-operation, and, after all, the thing we all want is to see the colleges and high schools work together."

Mrs. Harvey Sponsors Unique Gift Party

Mrs. Robert E. Harvey, president of the Woman's Missionary union of the Second Baptist church, was hostess at a very unique and interesting Christmas party given in the Sunday school room Monday afternoon.

Mrs. Harvey invited 800 women, all members of the church, to meet her at the church and to bring with them something, suitable as a gift for a child, and plan for the happiness of hundreds who will benefit from this novel affair.

The forepart of the afternoon was spent in arranging the baskets and filling stockings with most acceptable gifts. Tea was served from a table hand-some in its appointments of silver and crystal combined with the colorful decorations which were suggestive of the holiday season.

Gifts were sent to fifty children at the Andrew Stewart nursery; thirty children at the East Hill sanatorium, while five dozen glasses of jelly were sent to the Georgia Baptist hospital. The idea was entirely original with Mrs. Harvey and proved a most successful occasion. She directed her efforts through the Second Baptist church, and the Federated Council of Church Workers, but baskets were filled for the needy persons connected with the church, and many outside of the church.

The officers of the missionary society received with Mrs. Harvey, and included Mrs. Frances Brown Chase, Mrs. Ernest Brown, Mrs. H. A. Porter, Mrs. William J. Thebaud and Mrs. Frederic J. Paxon.

Seven Christmas Stories

Wanted—Two Husbands

—To save one. Young wife whose husband is in the clutches of two unscrupulous flappers desires to meet two bachelors between ages of twenty and forty. Object: Matrimony.

BY INEZ KLUMPH

Illustrated by Marguerite Neale

WHO'S WHO AND WHAT'S HAPPENED. Cynthia Moore had been happy with her husband, Roger, until the arrival of his two cousins, Monica and Lucile Lane, who came on a year's visit. They upset the household—Monica flirted with Roger and Cynthia flared herself. While her best friend, Margaret Calhoun, was taking a rest cure, Cynthia let herself be amused by Margaret's husband.

CHAPTER XXXII.

Hugh Kendall's Plan.

Cynthia tried desperately to pull herself together during the few moments between the last two quarters of the game. She tried to talk to Bruce, who was as responsive as a clam, and apparently had sunk so deep in the jealous gloom inspired by Margaret's departure with Hugh Kendall that he had forgotten the existence of everyone else. Yale's defeat meant little to Ted, too, apparently. He seemed as joyous as ever when Cynthia caught his eye. She wondered why any of them had bothered to come to the game at all, since it concerned them so little.

Yet when in the first few moments of play Yale scored, she saw that she had been wrong. Bruce came out of his gloom. Roger emerged from his. They shouted frantically. And when the noise had subsided, Roger turned to her, beaming.

"Tied the score!" he announced, as if she didn't know what a touchdown meant. "Tied 'em, anyway! Now for another one."

But there wasn't another, and they left the field a little later, still rather cold, but three of them were jubilant. Roger took Cynthia's arm and helped her through the crowd. "Not like beating 'em, of course," he continued. "Still it's better than having their opponents win. Now, let's find that car and hunt up Margaret, and then—"

Yale's defeat meant little to Ted.

ing along beside him at that moment. "Listen, Roger—will you let me drive back to town with you, and let Cynthia take my place in the car? You don't mind, do you, Cynthia? I can't tell you all about it now, but really, I just can't go back with Phil Harris' truly, I can't. You'll do it, won't you—please?"

"Why, sure—why?" Roger stammered, but Monica cut him short with—

Man of Mystery Seeks to Forget Behind Iron Bars

Commits Misdemeanor to Get in Jail—Says He Needs Guardian.

BY F. J. TURNER.

Police are holding a "man of mystery" under a blanket charge of "suspicion."

He is a fine looking man, well groomed and gave his occupation as a salesman, and says he is 30 years old.

For the police register he gave the name of Robert Harris, frankly telling the officers that it was not his right name.

He came to police station about 2 o'clock Monday afternoon and asked to be locked up. "What for?" demanded Desk Lieutenant Joseph Scott.

"I want to be sent off to the gang or somewhere else for a year, or so," he responded.

"Have you done anything to be jailed for?" inquired the lieutenant.

"Yes," the man of mystery answered. "I went to the Piedmont hotel and registered, knowing that the time I did not have money with which to pay my hotel bill, and did it for the purpose of being locked up, that I may be sent off for a year, or more."

"Why do you wish to be sent away here any longer?"

"No, let's find some place where we can have dinner as soon as we can. No use trying here, with this mob waiting," Bruce gadded.

"No, I have a plan that I think ought to sound good to you people," Hugh Kendall cut in. "Driving back to town tonight is going to be damned unpleasant, with the road jammed solid with cars, all trying to cut in ahead of each other. And you know what it will be like to try to get dinner anywhere! So why don't you all come home with us and stay all night? I've got a country place not so very far from here—haven't closed it yet this season. You'll get a good dinner—I can promise you that—and you can drive back to New York tomorrow and enjoy it? What do you say?"

As Bruce was the only one who did not care for the plan, and he concealed his feelings, they accepted Kendall's invitation. Cynthia smiled as they started on their drive to his house. Whatever else happened, Monica's little plan had failed!

HOW TO SAVE WHEN SHOPPING

By Ruth Leigh

Author of "The Human Side of Retail Selling," "The ABC of Retailing," Etc.

To the uninitiated shopper, buying a "seal" coat today is similar to buying a pig in a poke. Unless one is an expert in furs, it is hard to know the real from the imitation. To help you know when a seal is not seal, understand that there is only one genuine seal—that is Alaska seal. If you are buying a seal coat, and have a store's guarantee that you are getting Alaska seal—you will pay an accordingly high price. As seal is so cleverly imitated today, the average person cannot safely make her own tests of this fur; even the skilled fur experts are often deceived. Alaska seal, however, is what we know as "real" sealskin.

Hudson seal is dyed muskrat, and all other seals, such as Hudson Bay seal, Northern seal, Near seal, French seal, Arctic seal, Polar seal, Australian seal and Laskin seal are mere trade names for seal-dyed coney, which is rabbit skin.

To the average shopper, buying a fur coat demands even more care than buying jewelry. Jewels are usually appraised, but most people never know the real value of the furs they buy. Any store that sells "genuine" Hudson Bay seal, "genuine" French seal, "genuine" Arctic seal, or any of the so-called seals we have mentioned, is merely selling a trade name for dyed coney.

Be extremely careful, therefore, in buying a fur coat. Do not pay a very high price—the price rightly charged for a genuine seal coat—unless you get, and have guaranteed, genuine Alaskan seal. You will avoid disappointments if you heed this.

Some suggestions for Christmas shopping tomorrow. (Copyright, 1922, for The Constitution.)

A SURPRISE IN ROLLS

Did you ever think of hiding a surprise in your rolls?

If you never did, you don't know what a delight such rolls are for the family. Children, especially, love them, and they may be served for luncheon, with cocoa, to make a dessert unnecessary.

One roll is this. When the dough is ready to form into rolls cut it into pieces big enough, each, for one roll. Pat each piece flat, and in the very center place a lump of sugar. Pull up the edges and push and pat them together to form a roll or bun without opening. Then let them rise again and bake in a rather hot oven, hot enough to melt the lumps of sugar a little, but quick enough not to let the melted sugar run out to the bottom of the pan.

Another delicious roll is this: In the bottom of the square pan used for baking rolls place a thick layer of cinnamon and sugar, and place the rolls, one tight against another, in this pan. Bake in the usual way and turn out. The thick, sweet layer on top of them will delight anybody with a sweet tooth.

A stoned cooked prune, drained free from juice, may be placed in the center of the roll before it is cooked, the edges tucked up and pushed in, and the roll baked. This makes another delicious roll.

Remember that you can give your rolls different flavors at different times by adding eggs some weeks, more sugar other weeks, and some times raisins or currants, if your family likes them.

Bread is always a wholesome article of diet, if it is well made. And although too much sweet bread is not a good idea, yet if it is eaten instead of other sweets it is quite all right.

Wants a Guardian.

He was asked by a Constitution reporter if he would not rather form a good connection that would pay him, and save him the humiliation of a prison sentence. He said he would be glad of such an opportunity upon one condition—that was for some one to make him really feel at home, to take charge of his money as he earned it, and in fact be a guardian for him.

Upon the man's insistence that he be locked up, Call Officer J. W. Masburn, Sr., accommodated him and he is now "charged" to Officer Masburn on the state docket.

"One word more I would like to add to the charge against that man, lieutenant," remarked Officer Masburn as he escorted his guest toward the door of iron bars: "I wish you would also add 'mystery' to the word 'suspicion.'"

'Whiskey Piracy' Charge Called Frame-Up Here

Faucett Accused of Taking Automobile and Liquor From Negroes.

Charged in a warrant with having held up and robbed two negroes in Douglas county of an automobile, Frank Faucett, 26, of 806 South Pryor street, was placed under arrest Monday afternoon by Officers E. S. Acres and J. C. Swinney, and is being held for the Douglas county authorities.

While nothing definite could be learned concerning the alleged robbery, it was rumored at police station that Faucett is accused of having stopped an automobile which negroes occupied, and which is said to have contained a cargo of whiskey. It is then said that he forced the negroes to abandon the machine.

Faucett denies any connection with any robbery and states that his arrest is a "frame-up." Immediately after being brought to the station house he attempted to get in touch with officials in Douglasville by long distance phone to arrange to be released here on bond.

Getting On at the Office

BY HELEN ORMSBEE

WHAT'S A PROMISE BETWEEN FRIENDS?

BY HELEN ORMSBEE

It was after half-past 2 and the last straggling lunchers in the Blue Parrot tea room were beginning to leave. "Do you mind clearing up for me, Celia?" wheedled Maudie, the small brunette waitress, in her sweetest tone. "Mrs. Snyder said I could take some time off this afternoon, and I'm going over to see my cousins in Brooklyn. I'll be back at 5:30 for dinner."

She repeated her request. "You don't mind clearing up for me, do you, Celia? So I can be running along?" "Sure. It's all right, Maudie," returned Celia, who was naturally obliging.

"That's grand of you, Celia. I'll do it for you some time when you want to get off."

Celia broke in. "Fine! I take you on. What about tonight after dinner? I'm going to the movies this evening, and it'd help me out."

"Surest thing you know," agreed Maudie effusively.

She did not return from Brooklyn promptly at half-past 5, but hurried in breathlessly ten minutes later. "There's an early customer at that table of yours in the corner," Celia told her. "I took the order, so you wouldn't get in wrong with Mrs. Snyder."

Maudie looked grateful. "Say, that was grand of you, Celia. I didn't mean to be late, but—Well, I certainly do appreciate—"

"It wasn't so much," insisted Celia. "Only turn and turn about. You know you're going to clear up for me after dinner, so I can—"

Maudie gasped. "Oh, Celia, I—I

BEAUTY CHATS

By Edna E. Furbie

ANSWERED LETTERS.

Q.—As a simple method of arranging the hair it is suitable to you there should be no reason for changing it since girls of 15 years do not effect elaborate hair dressing. Try putting the hair on the side for a change. It is also one of the new ideas in hair arrangement for any age.

Ether—Liquor powders are very drying to the skin so no one with this tendency should use them regularly.

There is always some weight lost during the sweating period of Turkish bath; but it is not apt to be lasting and the body regains it quickly. The most reliable method of reducing is very little at a time. If you are in need of such directions I shall be glad to mail them to you on receipt of a s. a. e.

Q.—A frowning has become a habit with you the only way to correct the lines across your forehead is to break yourself of the frowning habit. A great help in doing this is to place a small piece of plaster over the lines—after you have first smoothed them out and massaged a nourishing cream into them. You can not frown then without tearing causing a little tug, and it is this slight reminder which very often teaches you to stop the frowning.

Charles—Ellen Constant wearing of low shoes will not enlarge the ankles. If it has any effect whatever it would be to make them more supple, and, therefore, more slender. Low shoes are so much in favor because of the freedom in motion that they continue in style for both winter and summer.

Louise—When peroxide is used for bleaching freckles it should not be diluted. Do not get it near the lashes or brows when using on the face as these will also be bleached.

Vera—After the skin has been allowed to get flabby it will take some time to make it firm. Usually such a condition comes from impaired health. The first thing to do is to build up the system, after which the skin will improve very fast under astringent treatments.

If you use hot water on the face always rinse with cold then cold and finally very cold water or an ice rub. The heat relaxes the skin and would increase the flabbiness. This condition is overcome, however, when you use the ice or cold water which closes the pores and tones the skin, making it firm.

John T.—Ingrowing hairs usually come from shaving too closely. It will benefit you to try a different method of shaving for a time.

Tomorrow—Do You Look Healthy?

All inquiries addressed to Miss Forbes in care of the "Beauty Chats" department will be answered in these columns in the next issue. This requires considerable time, however, owing to the great number received. THE HOME IN GOOD TASTE

By Harold Donaldson Eberlein

Just Author of "Practical Book of Interior Decoration," Etc.

No. 164—The Garden.

Even the city house may have a garden. A great nerve specialist in New York has so arranged his first reception room that its two very wide French doors look out upon a small, but lovely, formal garden, with clipped paths, clipped box borders and a high brick wall against which ivy grows. At the end of the garden, which boasts a sun dial in its center, is a fountain with a statue of a happy child and turtle, and on either side little cedar trees give a quiet green note against the faded brick of the wall.

That garden breathes quiet, order, rest. The doctor says that the picture of it which his patients acquire while they wait their turn gives the note to their thoughts which he wishes before he begins.

If a great nerve specialist realizes this importance, it is not worth our consideration? The Japanese realize that space is an emanation to beauty and each tiny garden is the expression of the owners' esthetic knowledge. We in America have been too apt to import our artistic ideas in their entirety from another country. Not only Japan, but Italy, France and England have given our gardens their cue. It is time that we learned for the immediate surrounding of our house what we have learned for our rooms—that the important thing is beauty, suitability, interest and for our nation of conscious nerves, peace.

Poached Eggs.
Pour a little vinegar into the water in which eggs are poached and they will not separate or spread.

Removing Scorch.
The burnt taste can be removed from slightly scorched milk by putting the pan into cold water and adding a pinch of salt to the milk.

How to Make Pine Cough Syrup at Home

Has no equal for prompt results. Takes but a moment to prepare, and saves you about $2.

Pine is used in nearly all prescriptions and remedies for coughs. The reason is that pine contains several elements that have a remarkable effect in soothing and healing the membranes of the throat and chest. Pine cough syrups are combinations of pine and syrup. The "syrup" part is usually plain sugar syrup.

To make the best pine cough remedy that money can buy, put 2½ ounces of Pinex in a pint bottle, and fill up with home-made sugar syrup. Or you can use clarified molasses, honey, or corn syrup, instead of sugar syrup. Either way, you make a full pint—more than you can buy ready-made for three times the money. It is pure, good and tastes very pleasant. You can feel this take hold of a cough or cold in a way that means business. The cough may be dry, hoarse and tight, or may be persistently loose from the formation of phlegm. The cause is the same—inflamed membranes—and this Pinex and Syrup combination will stop it—usually in 24 hours or less. Splendid, too, for bronchial asthma, hoarseness, or any ordinary throat ailment.

Pinex is a highly concentrated compound of genuine Norway pine extract, and is famous the world over for its prompt effect upon coughs. Beware of substitutes. Ask your druggist for "2½ ounces of Pinex" with directions, and don't accept anything else. Guaranteed to give absolute satisfaction or money refunded. The Pinex Co., St. Wayne, Ind.

"THE MAN FROM EARTH"
AT ATLANTA WOMAN'S CLUB

A group in the first act of the Princeton Triangle club's new production, "A Man from Earth," which will be presented in Atlanta on Wednesday evening, December 27, in the auditorium of the Atlanta Woman's club.

The Princeton Triangle club will present its new show, "The Man from Earth," a musical comedy, at the Woman's club auditorium on December 27. The name of the organization gives very little clue to its activities, but tradition has it that the three angles referred to are symbolic of three institutions which have originally combined to form the club, namely the Glee, Banjo and Dramatic societies. Such a formidable aggregation of college activities should produce a very large result, and apparently the outcome has not been disappointing; for ever since this bit of geometry was performed in 1893, chiefly under the leadership of Booth Tarkington, '93, (the club's first president), a yearly musical show has been staged with ever increasing success until last year it was said that "might" last a long time on Broadway. The author of this statement was none less than the dictator of Broadway, Florenz Ziegfeld.

Such an achievement is all the more remarkable when it is considered that no one has a finger in the pie but the Princeton students. There are only two exceptions to this statement, a member of the faculty who exercises general supervision and censorship, and an instructor in dancing, who occasionally drops in to help train the chorus "girls." Aside from this the production is entirely "home-brewed." The scenic effects are designed and executed by the undergraduate stage department; the costumes were designed and made by the students, and the dialogue, lyrics, and music are entirely of undergraduate inspiration. And, finally, the entire production is the result of the social importance of the event. "The Man from Earth" should in itself afford an evening most entertaining.

Outstanding among the events of the coming Christmas season, both socially and theatrically, is the advent of the Princeton Triangle club with their musical comedy, "The Man from Earth." The performance will take place on December 27, at the Woman's club auditorium. The Princeton club needs little introduction here. Their reputation for polished and original performances which have been held consistently for the last 30 years is so widespread that, although this is the first long trip through the south, there is already a great demand for tickets all along the route. Let it suffice to say that this year's show promises to live up to the highest traditions of the club.

It has several experienced men on the cast staff of last year's success, "Española," and a plot which is exceedingly original. The scene, laid on Mars, admits of many possibilities for the scene painters. This, combined with the smoothness of execution, the lively music, and the fine finish, which has always been a part of Triangle productions, should form a novelty in the way of college dramatics and a real treat for Atlanta.

In the personnel of this year's Princeton Triangle club production, "The Man from Earth," are two students who have been recently given Rhodes scholarships. The two students are E. T. Thomas '23 and W. Pell, II, '24.

The Rhodes scholarships are granted each year to one student from each state of the union and they offer an opportunity for continuing studies in Oxford university, England. The award is based on the qualities of manhood, leadership, and force of character of the candidates, on literary and scholastic attainments, and on participation in many sports. On account of the wide variety of qualifications, the Rhodes scholarship is considered the highest honor awarded by the university.

Pell lives in New York city and prepared for Princeton at St. Mark's school. He has maintained a second group average in studies since he has been in the university and is now a member of the Ivy club and on the varsity crew squad. In his freshman year he played on the football team. He finished his work at Princeton this year and will begin his work at Oxford next fall.

Thomas is a member of the Varsity club, having pitched on the baseball team for two years, and played on the 1921 championship soccer team. He has served on the Philadelphia society cabinet, and is a member of the Cap and Gown club.

It has been recently announced that J. C. Taylor, 1923, Princeton's well known hurdler and quarter-mile runner, will appear in the chorus of the musical comedy, "The Man from Earth," which will be given here by the Princeton Triangle club, on December 27. Taylor will desert the clubbers and in place of strenuous work on the track, he will be found in the no less arduous but much more delightful task of playing opposite a "fair" member of the chorus.

Taylor has acquired a brilliant record as a sprinter, hurdler and broad-jumper. He prepared at the Kent school, after which he entered the class of 1923 at Princeton. In his freshman year he played football and hockey. By earnest and hard work he now holds the title of national and intercollegiate low hurdler champion, besides making a new record in the same event at Princeton. As a quarter-mile runner he is an excellent pet for anchor man of this year's mile relay team, and in addition to these achievements, the Thespian laurels also must be added.

OUR CHILDREN
WHY PUNISHMENT FAILS

BY ANGELO PATRI

Author of "A Schoolmaster in the Great City," Principal of Public School 45, The Bronx.

"He's a determined little sinner. I made him stand in the corner. I made him eat bread and water for his supper. I made him go to bed alone. And still he wouldn't even look sorry. Just grim and determined."

"Aren't you sorry you spoke like that to your granny?" "Nope," said he, just as stubborn as ever."

"If you'd given him a good spanking, he'd have changed his mind fast enough and been sorry for his impudence," said the listener, emphatically.

"I don't believe in whipping children. I punish them in other ways. I'll find some way of punishing him that will make him remember so he won't do it again."

I doubt it. I very much doubt it. The more I see of children the longer I watch the effects of the punishments administered by parents and teachers and guardians the more I am inclined to believe that punishment is rarely, very rarely, effective.

If it is, why does the boy who has been whipped repeatedly for swearing continue to swear?

If punishment is effectual, why does the child who has been beaten and sent to bed in the dark to sob out his pain and grief in loneliness and fear lie again the very next morning?

If punishment does all its advocates claim for it, why does the child who has been locked up for playing craps, strapped for sw. ng newspapers, starved for a day and a night for stealing fruit, continue to do so, and more, when the opportunity presents itself?

I doubt that these good people who strive so earnestly by such a hard method to purify childhood have the right idea. The right idea ought to work—and the punishment idea doesn't seem to.

You see, it cannot work, because it does not reach the child's idea, his purpose, his will. These have to be reached and changed before the conduct that distresses us will change.

When we scold a child fiercely, shake him, cuff him, stand him in the corner, and all that, we haven't reached him or his idea, which is the boy really. We haven't touched him at all. He is sitting away inside himself, resenting the discomforts and annoyance we have caused him. He is refusing our claim to have power over him. His spirit is soaring beyond our reach. We are powerless to help him in his need because we have stirred his soul to revolt.

Jakie sat on old man Hart's woodbox and kicked his heels to make a noise like thunder. Old man Hart stole up behind him and captured him and "dusted" him. As Jakie scrambled out of reach he shrieked defiantly, "Never touched me, never touched me." And I knew old man Hart had laid in a store of trouble for himself. And all because he hadn't touched Jakie.

I'm more and more inclined to believe that punishment doesn't touch any child.

MAKING YOUR BID

BY JOHN R. BOWKER

Today's Rule—It is not advisable to lay down an ace just to take a peep at the dummy.

Q. Player to my left bids a no trump and it is passed around to me. I have a very fine hand: Ace, jack and 7 of spades; ace, queen and 5 of hearts; queen and two small diamonds; ace, queen, jack and one small club. Should I double the one no trump to call the lead?

A. I would bid two no trump as you have the strength of the entire deck and I am sure your partner could not put in a bid that would be as good as a two no trump.

Q. Partner bids one heart. Second hand bids two diamonds. I hold four diamonds to the king and jack; two small hearts; queen, jack, 10 and a small spade; three clubs to the ace. Should I bid two hearts?

A. I would advise bidding two no trump, as you lay over the opponents diamond suit. I think a hand of this description would fit better with a no trump than with two hearts.

Q. During the bidding one of my opponents said "No" and then tried to change to a no trump. I claim that there was a penalty, but was overruled. Was I right?

A. According to the law, if a player pass, bid, double, or redouble, and then attempts to change to some other form of declaration, such change may be penalized as a bid out of turn.

Q. What is the rule relating to any player exposing a card during the declaration?

A. If any player lead or expose a card during the declaration, the card must be left face upwards on the table, and the partner of the player who exposed the card cannot make a declaration.

Q. In the town in which I live, it is the custom when players have no face cards in their hands to ask for a new deal. Under what rule are they entitled to same?

A. You must take what cards are given to you and play them. You are simply out of luck. But as cards generally average themselves up in the long run, always make the best of what you have.

THE BROKEN GATE

BY EMERSON HOUGH

Next Week, "The Diamonds"
By J. S. Fletcher

She turned, not knowing what to do, unwilling to leave him standing there.

"It's been years, Aurora. Now listen—I'm going up in the world myself, at last. I want to take you with me. I didn't want to say anything till the right time. It's been a long, hard pull for me, too, here in this town. It's hard for men like me to talk."

"You mustn't talk," said she. "You mustn't say a word you mustn't be seen here."

He looked at her slowly. "I'm here deliberately," said he. "Listen now—I must tell you some things, Aurora. I've loved you from the first day I saw you. Can't you credit me at least a little? You're splendid—you're beautiful—and you're good."

She choked a bit, raised a hand in swift protest.

"You're still young, Aurora," said he, not paying attention to what she said. "Of course, I'm older, but there's a lot of time left yet for you and me—a lot of living. You've had mighty little out of life, here by yourself. Now I've stood it as long as I can. The whole truth about the boy has broken out today and can't ever be covered up again, at least to me. I just had to tell you that you needed me to take care of you—someone more than just yourself. Things may be harder for you now. They've been hard enough already. You need help. Who more natural to help you than myself, feeling as I have, as I do?"

"Oh, you mustn't talk that way!" Her voice trembled. "You must go away. I'm not good."

"You're good enough for me—good as I am, surely—and I want to get into this game with you now. You need me. That means we've got to be married. Of course, the boy's gone, but he'll be going away. You need a man—a husband—someone you can depend on, Aurora. Isn't there anything welcome in that thought for you? Aurora, I want to marry you—at once, right away, I say that right now and here."

Aurora Lane looked this way and that, every way. Her gaze happened to go down the long vista beneath the maples, to fall upon the face of the town clock on the courthouse. The hour hand with a short jerk moved forward and the deep note of the bell boomed out—it was 1 o'clock of the night; and all was not well.

She turned as she felt the tense grasp of his great hands still upon her own.

"You say that—to me?" she managed to say at last. "Why, everybody knows—all the town knows—that you've left here now after what's happened. But you'd have to leave if you took up with such a man as this. I don't think of your own prospects? Why, I couldn't marry you, no matter how much I loved you."

"You don't love me at all?"

"How could I?"

"That's true," said he simply. "How could you?"

"I don't mean that," she corrected herself hastily.

"It's just what I said," he rejoined. "This seems accidental to me. I can't allow these people to murder you a dozen times a week the way they will do now. You can't make this fight alone any more, Aurora—I can't any longer bear to see you try it. It's all over now. It's going to be harder for you after this."

"And yet you ask me to marry you. If I did, one of two things—surely would be said, and either of them would make you wretched all your life."

"Maybe," said he slowly. "But you see, after all, it's only a theoretical hurt I'm taking if I stand between you and those damned harpies here. I want to have the right to take care of you."

"I don't think it's a fair argument, but I ought to point out to you that, perhaps I've got a chance in the world. They wanted me, for instance, to make the run for the senatorship—against Judge Henderson. Today I agreed with him not to accept the candidacy. In return he agreed to drop that case against Don. Well, you've traded me out of the United States senate, Aurora. But I made that trade—for you and the boy."

She looked up at him in sudden astonishment. She could not evade the feeling of shelter in his great presence as he stood there, speaking calmly, absolutely in hand a grotesque and yet a great soul—yes, a great soul as it seemed to her, so used to little souls. Sacrifice? Had he not given freely as a sacrifice, the greatest gift a man has—his home for power and preference? And he spoke of it as though it were a little thing. Aurora was large enough to know a large gift, belittled though it were by the door of the deed.

"You mustn't talk," said she, "because it only is to make us both the more unhappy. You're quiet enough or great enough—I don't know which—I can't tell—I don't know which—I can't take the shame on your own shoulders in order to take it off mine! You can't mean that! Not no. One life ruined is enough—you've ruined yours enough already, today, by what you've done for Don and me."

She felt the great hand closing on top of hers.

"Listen, Aurora," said he, "if it doesn't seem that you and I can be married, there's nothing in the world which makes it wrong for me to help you all I can—you mustn't think that I didn't love you. You don't think that, do you?"

"I don't know what I think," said she, rubbing at the ceaseless tears, so new to her. "All these matters have been out of my life forever, as I thought. But it's hard for a woman to live all alone—it's almost a thing impossible—she's so lonesome—sometimes I almost think I could depend on you, even now."

"That's fine," said he, choking up. "That's fine. I expect that's about all I had coming to me after all. So I oughtn't to be sorry—I ought to be very happy. They about the finest thing I ever heard."

"And the sweetest words I ever heard were what you said just now—after knowing all you do about me."

"But you won't tell me that you'll marry me now?" He bent and picked up her hand in both his great ones. "I know you will not." He kissed her hand gently. And presently she was sensible that his shambling figure was passing away down the street under the checkered shadows of the maples.

Aurora Lane stood for just a moment, how long she did not know. There came to her ear the sound of running footsteps. Her boy came down the street, passing Horace Brooks with a wave of his hand. He reached her side now as she still stood at the gate. He was panting, perspiring a trifle. She hurried into the house ahead of him.

CHAPTER VII.

Aurora and Don were at breakfast the next morning when the telephone rang and Aurora answered.

"It's Miss Julia," said she excitedly.

square on which Judge Henderson had his office. "You may get out here, miss," said he. "I think you'll find the judge in right now."

"But why—what's the reason?" she began, much perturbed, and looking at Don. "What's wrong, Don? Aren't you coming?"

"Yes?"

"When you were running last night, you must have passed right close to there! You didn't see anything strange?"

"Of course not! I'd have looked into it. I don't recall that particular house."

"Well," he added, after a moment's silence, "in spite of all that happened yesterday between him and us, I'm not going to call him anything but a good man."

She looked at him strangely—studied his face steadily.

"I'll be going out now, I think—I'm going to run over to see Julia for a time. Please don't go out on the street, Don. Stay right here. We got into trouble enough yesterday."

"You needn't fear," said he. "There is nothing and nobody in this town I want to see."

She left, and soon he began a restless walking up and down in the narrow quarters which seemed to him such a prison.

Meantime all Spring Valley was afoot and agog over this news. It seemed the marshal had been hit in the head with some heavy instrument and had barely managed to stumble into his home, where his daughter heard him mumble "Someone hit me." Then he died.

The star reporters of the Columbus dailies were on the through train, No. 5, as was learned by telephone: that the arrival of No. 5 this day would be a matter of interest.

Of exact details in these matters, Don knew little. It was for reasons of his own that he was at the little station to meet the train. Anne Oglesby was coming.

Dully he felt that here and there an eye was turned upon him, that here and there a word was spoken about him, but his anger at this loss of the greater emotion that filled his heart. Anne was coming—she was almost here! And he must say good-bye.

No. 5 swung around the curve into the stretch of straight track leading down to the station and stopped.

Don's moody face suddenly lighted up. A young woman was stepping down at the farther end of the train. Now she was coming along the edge of the platform, carrying in one hand a trim little bag, in the other a trim little umbrella. Now she was looking about, expectant. It was she—Anne.

His heart leaped out to her, his love rose surgingly at sight of her, sweet and beautiful as she seemed, and all so fit for love of man.

A tall young girl she was, who walked with head well up and the suggestion of tennis about her—an indefinable something also about her indicative of physical well-being. Trim and well appointed, she was one of those types whom unhesitatingly we class as aristocrats.

Her eyes, too, lighted up at sight of the young man who now hurried forward to meet her, but no unseemly agitation marked her own personal conduct in public. Demure, clean, cool and sweet, all in hand, she did not hasten nor hold back.

Don stepped forward swiftly, impulsively, irresistibly. He caught her quickly in his arms before all the crowd and kissed her—once. It was a great salutation to love—a salutation of great longing—a salutation which meant farewell.

She gasped, flushed rosy red, but walked straight along with him as he caught the bag from her hands. She looked up at him, astonished, yet not wholly resentful. It was no place for speech. As for this curious crowd, they did not chill or offend—Anne Oglesby suddenly wished to take all the world into her arms and greet it. Anne Oglesby at that moment loved—the touch of this man's lips on hers had wrought the irrevocable, immortal, awful change.

They had not yet spoken a word. These two, at the time he left her to call some vehicle for her use. He turned and looked directly into the face of Dan Cowles, sheriff, a man whom he had never seen before, but who now reached out and laid a hand upon his shoulder. Cowles had that instant reached the station platform. Don would have passed, but the sheriff spoke:

"I want you. Come with me."

The tempestuous blood of the young man flamed at this, but now, as he looked into the solemn face before him, he found something to give him pause. "What's up?" he demanded. "Who are you?"

"I'm the sheriff of this county," said Cowles. "Come with me."

"What do you want?" again demanded Don. "I'm with this young lady."

"That's no difference," said Cowles. "I must be about the Tarbush matter. I'll testify, but I know nothing of that. I'll come on over directly. This young lady is going to Judge Henderson's."

The sheriff looked at the young girl curiously. The crowd had surged about them.

"What is it, Don?" she exclaimed. "What has happened?" the Tarbush case—what do you mean?"

"I'm going to take him to the coroner's hearing, miss," said the sheriff in a low voice.

"Why, you see, Anne," began Don. "The city marshal of this town was killed last night. I suppose the coroner is looking into it. The Tarbush case—Don felt the sheriff again touch his arm. "Step into my car," said he, "both of you—you get on the front seat with me."

A moment later they were whirling off up the dusty street toward the central part of the town.

Cowles pulled up on the side of the

Yes, Mr. Sheriff," said Don, "let me go up with her. I'll be right on over."

The big man looked at the two, a sort of pity in his face. "I'm sorry," said he, "but you'll have to come with me right away. Tell me, are you Anne Oglesby, his kin from over Columbus way?"

"Yes, yes," said she. "I've been here before. But tell me, what does this mean? Is this murder? It's an awful thing, isn't it? It seems to me I remember the marshal's name—maybe I've seen him. Who did it—whom do they suspect?"

"That's what we don't know for sure," said the sheriff, "and it's what we've got to find out. The testimony was not much more than completed when the jury returned the verdict: 'We the jury sitting upon the body of Joel Tarbush, deceased by violence, find that deceased came to his death by a blow from a blunt instrument held in the hands of Deudonne Lane.'"

CHAPTER VIII.

Judge Henderson was sitting alone in the front room of his cool and spacious office, absorbed in the contemplation of a bit of paper in his hand. It was a message from the telephone company, and it came from Slatery, county prosecutor. Something in what was said was disturbing nature. So engrossed was he that he did not hear one who crossed the room swiftly to catch him and blindfold him.

The Aces will be heard in a number of popular orchestration, "Home-socks," "Romany Love," "Waltz of the Aces" and other selections which have made this orchestra one of the best known in the United States, and perhaps the leading radio entertainer in the nation. Byron H. Warner, director of the Aces, is one of the best pianists and orchestra leaders in the south and has correlated a band of musicians who are well trained and experienced. The Aces enjoy wide popularity with listeners to this station.

Miss Martha Crowe, the brilliant young soprano, who will intersperse the orchestration with vocal numbers, scored a distinct triumph at this station last week by her rendition of popular songs. She has a remarkable voice, well suited to radio and her appearance on tonight's program will add much to the enjoyment of the hour's offering.

Miss Dena Castleberry, well known young Atlanta pianist, will play the piano accompaniment for Miss Crowe.

In the Air WITH WGM

A Few Notes on Canadian Reports

Canadians sort of came to the front in yesterday's mail. A couple of these reports stand out as representing real distance.

Station WGM likes the real distance reports for they show the territory its concert covers. Edmonton, Alberta, is more than 2,500 miles air line from Atlanta, yet I. L. Glover, 7918 105th street, Edmonton, writing The Constitution, declares that he thought at first he had a local station.

The program he heard was that given by Nora Allen, Mrs. Rose L. Mathews and Signor Volpi a week ago Saturday night for relatives of Miss Allen in Chicago. He writes as follows:

"I am pleased to inform you that on Saturday, December 9, I heard your station remarkably well.

"I was using a Northern Electric three-stage amplifier set using peanut valves. Your transmission was so plain I at first thought I had a local station."

When a station roars through the air for 2,500 miles, it's something of which to be proud, and we are proud of such records as this is.

The other Canadian listener who really is long haul from Atlanta is W. H. Danforth, chief clerk to the manager of the Winnipeg Electric Railway company, of Winnipeg, Manitoba.

His letter is short, but to the point. He heard the same program over which Mr. Glover was enthused. He writes as follows:

"You will be pleased to know that on Saturday night I received your station very clearly and enjoyed your concert very much. I shall be listening for you again."

Then there were two reports from Toronto, Ontario. Toronto isn't so far away from Atlanta, as distance is considered by Station WGM, but still it is about 1,000 miles air line.

One of the Toronto listeners to WGM's concert is A. W. Jackson, 1045 Bloor street west, Toronto. He writes the following card:

"Concerts very clear. Hope to hear more in future. Your talent is the best I have heard."

The other Toronto listener whose card was received yesterday is B. Roy Jones, 35 Sunnydale avenue, his card reads:

"Using a home-made single tube set without amplification and with the headphones, we got your concert loud and clear. Congratulations to you on the broadcast."

Washington, December 18.—The musical program offered daily by The Atlanta Constitution's broadcasting station has proved to be a source of entertainment to radio fans at the national capital.

James D. Preston, superintendent of the senate press gallery, who is one of the most ardent admirers of the aerial phenomenon, declared today that The Constitution's program is picked up each night and is always heard distinctly.

Mr. Preston was enthusiastic about the program broadcasted Sunday night, remarking that fans assembled at his home enjoyed particularly the song, "Mighty Lak a Rose." Incidentally, Mr. Preston stated that not until it was announced last night "in the air" did he know Frank L. Stanton, veteran columnist of The Constitution, was the author of the words of the song, which is one of his favorites.

Since radio development has made such strides the press gallery official has arranged a studio in his home, where numbers assemble nightly to listen-in on the array of music and entertainment broadcasted from the large number of stations over the country. He states that stations as far west as Iowa are heard clearly.

Mr. Preston commented on the policy of The Constitution to announce the station's status as a prominent part of the program, he said, adding that it was difficult otherwise to determine the source of the program.

One of the chief instigators in the move to have congressional speeches broadcasted throughout the country, having already taken the first steps toward the installation of amplifiers in the house of representatives chamber, Mr. Preston is planning a special radio entertainment at the press club, and will pick up The Constitution's station as a prominent part of the program, he said.

Two Favorites
AT WGM TONIGHT

Miss Gertrude Maurer, Coloratura Soprano, and Donald H. King, Tenor, in Volpi Arrangement.

Fans of WGM will be treated to an exceptionally strong musical program tonight at the 9:30 to 10:30 broadcast when Signor E. Volpi will present two of his advanced pupils, Miss Gertrude Maurer, coloratura soprano, and Donald H. King, tenor. These two artists are extremely popular with listeners to this station and will offer a program of semi-classical and popular songs which will find hearty welcome in the hearts of lovers of good music.

Miss Maurer has endeavored herself to thousands of silent listeners through the nation in previous appearances

WANTS NIGHT IS BIG SUCCESS

Second Program by Kiwanis Club of Atlanta Offered Pleasing Features by Widely Known Artists.

Last night was "Kiwanis night" at WGM. The Atlanta Kiwanis club scored its second triumph in as many months at this station last night at the 9:30 to 10:30 o'clock broadcast, when well known artists of that splendid civic organization arranged a program of special interest to Kiwanians throughout Canada and the United States.

Last night's offering included a variety of music which listeners will not soon forget. Vocal numbers, cello selections, piano selections, piano and band duets, and short talks featured one of the stars of the program was offered from WGM. Each number was by a member of the Atlanta Kiwanis club and prominent in musical circles in Atlanta.

Forest Traynor opened the program with a piano solo, "Home-socks," and later during the program offered other piano selections, among them "Kittens on the Keys." The latter number was requested by more than 40 listeners to the first special Kiwanis program at WGM in November. Mr. Traynor is a finished pianist and in touch and tone and style, is an artist of exceptional merit and ability. His contribution to WGM programs on previous occasions has endeared him to thousands of fans.

Enrico Ledi, director of the Howard and theater of Atlanta and one of the nation's most celebrated cellists, gave the first solo on cello, "Mighty Lak a Rose." The first number was repeated by Mr. Ledi at the special request of President Sherard Kennedy, of the Atlanta club, who was in attendance at the concert.

In setting forth the purposes of the corporation, the right to operate vessels as floating schools for girls as well as boys was asked.

Mr. Candler started in Monday that nothing definite is ready to announce as to the personnel of the faculty. W. A. Sutton, superintendent of Atlanta's schools, recently declined to manage the venture.

Clarence Aldred, one of the most popular tenors in Atlanta, sang "Mighty Lak a Rose" in the West and other numbers in his own highly pleasing manner. His voice is unusually well trained and mellow, and his rendition of "Mighty Lak a Rose" was especially for his mother, Mrs. Frances Aldred, and party of friends in Eustis, Fla., was an outstanding feature of the program.

Arthur Falkenberg, banjoist, and Harvey Trice, baritone, pupil of Mrs. Carroll Sumner, of the Atlanta Conservatory of Music, gave the first vocal number, "Mighty Lak a Rose," which was highly enjoyed, and contributed much to the success of the program.

Mrs. Margaret Kennedy McCreary, recording secretary of the Atlanta club, concluded the program with a short talk.

Arrangements had been made by many Kiwanis clubs throughout the nation to receive last night's special offering by Atlanta Kiwanians. The Portland, Me., club was observing the annual "Kiwanis" night last night and had installed special apparatus to receive WGM's broadcast. Sam Talley, of Billings, Mont., entered his home at the score of Billings Kiwanians with his set, and the Springfield, Tenn., club installed a loud speaker in the courthouse of the Kiwanis club but many Kiwanis enjoyed last night's special program.

As a whole, the program was unusually well received, and rendered by artists who are not only prominent in Atlanta musical circles, but who enjoy wide popularity throughout the south.

The third "Kiwanis night" will be held at WGM in January, the exact date to be announced later.

FORMER DETECTIVE IS GRANTED PAROLE

Lon Terry, Convicted on Liquor Charge, Serves Two-Thirds of Sentence.

Governor Thomas W. Hardwick Monday announced he had granted a parole to former city detective Lon Terry, who has been serving a twelve months' sentence following his conviction on charges of violating the prohibition law. Terry was convicted with his former detective partner, O. M. Howell.

Terry had served eight months of his twelve months' sentence. The governor said he would grant a parole also to Howell, but he has served only four months of his twelve months' sentence.

The former detectives were convicted after charges had been made against them by Clarence Hart, a man who has been accused by police of being a bootlegger.

Last August the state prison commission recommended that the detectives be paroled on their service up to that time with the payment of a fine of $340. The governor declined to grant the parole at that time.

Enrollment in the Candler Floating School, Inc., may include girls as well as boys, it was indicated Monday in an application for charter filed in Fulton superior court by Asa G. Candler, Jr., and Major E. T. Winston, promoter of the unique enterprise.

The application asked that a capitalization of $100,000 be authorized, and that the incorporators be granted the privilege of increasing it to $1,000,000 at any time.

In setting forth the purposes of the corporation, the right to operate vessels as floating schools for girls as well as boys was asked.

Mr. Candler started in Monday that nothing definite is ready to announce as to the personnel of the faculty. W. A. Sutton, superintendent of Atlanta's schools, recently declined to manage the venture.
